SIGHTSEEING TRIP LEADS TO DEATH

Michigan Mother Of Six Is Killed In Grinding Head-On Highway Crash

By STEPHEN COOK

A Michigan mother of six on her first visit to California was killed in the grinding head-on crash of two station wagons two miles south of Lucas Valley Road on Highway 101 yesterday. (See photo, page 9.)

Seven other persons were injured.

Mrs. Angeline C. Luther, 46, of Ironwood, Mich., was dead on arrival at San Rafael General Hospital 23 minutes after the 12:40 p.m. crash.

Her 9-year-old daughter, Connie, was in critical condition today in Marin General Hospital's intensive care unit, where she was being treated for chest and internal injuries and cuts on her face.

Three more victims were in fair condition, while two were listed as satisfactory. One was sent home after treatment.

The California Highway Patrol said the accident occurred when Dorothy B. Anderson, 64, of Bodega Bay, driving north, swerved her Ford station wagon to the right-hand shoulder of the road, then careened back across the three north-bound lanes. The car crashed through the dividing guard rail and slammed head-on into a Chevrolet station wagon driven by Robert J. Luther, 25, of Fair Oaks, Sacramento County, married son of Angeline Luther.

The impact spun his car around, patrolmen said. It was struck again by the oncoming car and rolled over onto the side of the road.

Mrs. Anderson underwent surgery for a broken left leg and cuts on her face at San Rafael General Hospital. She was in fair condition today.

Her daughter, Irene Burke, 40, of Bodega Bay, was treated for a cut leg, then sent home. She gave this account of the crash.

"We were going about 50 miles per hour and everything seemed fine. It felt like we hit a bump and mother yelled, "Look out honey!' All I could see were white posts and then I saw the other car."

Robert Luther told Assistant County Coroner William C. Bradley his mother and two of her daughters were visiting with his family in Fair Oaks. They had been in Vallejo earlier in the day, he said, and his mother asked to see the Golden Gate Bridge while they were in the area.

The family was en route to the bridge when the crash occurred.

Luther was in satisfactory condition at Marin General Hospital today. He suffered multiple bruises, scrapes and cuts on his left arm.

Other victims, all at Marin General Hospital, were:

His wife Carol, 27, who suffered a crushed right hand. Surgeons said she may lose its use permanently. Doctors also feared she may suffer a miscarriage of a baby due in two or three months.

The Luthers' son, Robbie, 3, is in satisfactory condition. He suffered a fractured skull and scrapes on the face. A concussion was also feared.

Becky Luther, 5-year-old daughter of Angeline, in fair condition with a broken left arm and cuts on her legs.

Also surviving Mrs. Angeline Luther are her husband, Robert P. Luther, a construction superintendent who stayed in Ironwood while his wife came West to visit; three daughters, Susan Luther of Ironwood, Caroline Pulver and Geraldine Cole of Wisconsin; her mother, Josephine DeRubeis of Ironwood; and a brother and sister.

Funeral arrangements are pending.

U. S. Grand Jury Indicts Fugitives In Crime Spree

COMBINED AP & UPI

SACRAMENTO—A federal grand jury indicted two ex-convicts today on three counts of kidnaping following a three-state spree climaxed by the safe release of California finance director Hale Champion, his wife and baby daughter.

The jury was in session only 35 minutes.

Arraignment before U.S. District Judge Sherrill Halbert took only three minutes. The judge set July 21 for entering pleas and appointed defense attorneys.

The two men who led a suspense-filled chase from Oregon into California and Nevada were returned to the Sacramento County Jail.

California demanded jurisdiction over Carl Cletis Bowles, 24, and Wilford M. Gray, 30, who faced a federal grand jury today for allegedly kidnaping Champion, his wife and their 19-month-old daughter, who were released unharmed. The state was hoping to take jurisdiction of the case away from federal authorities.

OREGON IRED OVER CUSTODY OF FUGITIVES

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI)—The refusal of U.S. Atty. Cecil Poole to relinquish custody of Wilfred M. Gray and Carl Cletis Bowles to Lane County drew the ire of Oregon officials today.

The two men, charged with kidnaping in California, are wanted for murder in Lane County.

Lane County Dist. Atty. William Frye said the duo was being kept in California because Poole was a "friend" of Hale Champion.

"He (Poole) apparently feels his friends are more important than the death of a Lane County deputy sheriff," Frye said.

Bowles and Gray slept on beds for the first time last night since they allegedly began a spree of bank robbery, rape, murder and kidnap Monday that ranged over Oregon, California and Nevada.

A complaint was filed last night charging them with two counts under California's "Little Lindbergh" law. One count accused them of causing bodily harm to their captives. This charge could carry the death penalty.

Robert K. Puglia, chief criminal department district attorney for Sacramento County, said, "we think they ought to be tried in Sacramento. We want to prosecute."

"We hope we are given the opportunity. California should take jurisdiction. If convicted, they could be punished under the state's Little Lindbergh Act which carries a more appropriate punishment, in my opinion, than any sought by the federal authorities."

U.S. Attorney Cecil Poole said yesterday the fugitives may not face the death penalty.

Poole said that under the Lindbergh Act, a federal kidnaping charge could carry the death penalty only if bodily harm was done. Although Champion was wounded in the leg, he said, the shooting was done by a Nevada card dealer trying to stop the suspects.

The spokesman also said that although Oregon has abolished the death penalty, if that state decides to link the slaying of a deputy sheriff with the bank robbery, federal law provides for a maximum sentence of

Australian Breaks Own Track Mark

LONDON (AP) — Australia's Ron Clarke surpassed his own world record for the three mile run today with a fantastic time of 12 minutes, 52.4 seconds.

The flying Australian turned in a time eight seconds faster than his own pending world mark of 13:00.4 although he ran on a track made heavy by rain.

His pending record was set at Compton, Calif., last month and eclipsed his listed world standard of 13:17.6 established on Dec. 3, 1964 at Melbourne, Australia.

Clarke also has a pending mark of 13:25.8 for 5,000 meters — 3 miles, 188 yards — which he ran at Los Angeles last June 5.

The Aussie's record-smashing three-miler came in the British Amateur Athletic Assn.'s championships at White City Stadium. Rain fell almost continuously throughout the meet.

Gerry Lindgren, of Spokane, Wash., was the man who paced Clarke to the new record. Together they broke away from the rest of the field and opened up a half-lap lead.

Three-quarters of a mile from the finish, the little American ran out of steam. Clarke appeared to say something to him over his shoulder, apparently urging him on.

But Lindgren dropped back, and Clarke forged ahead on his own.

When the bell went for the last lap it was obvious that the world record was going. The crowd of 10,000 rose to its feet and roared Clarke on.

The Australian overtook stragglers in the race as he came down the final straight.

Clarke's time at one mile was 4:15.4, and at two miles 8:36.4.

Lindgren finished in 13:04.2 — the fastest three miles ever run by an American.

His own previous best time was 13:17.0.

Fair Weather For Weekend

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Fair weather and little change in temperatures were forecast for California this weekend.

Patches of night and morning fog could be expected near the coast.

Crash Into House Injures Marinite

Norman Kedrick Reinhard Jr., 22, of 95 Twin Oaks Avenue, San Rafael, suffered deep facial cuts early today when his car crashed into a house at 1621 Mission Avenue, San Rafael.

Police said he apparently fell asleep at the wheel.

Officer John F. Riordan said he came upon the scene at 1:55 a.m., and found Reinhard lying on the front seat bleeding heavily.

The car's front end hit the front steps and retaining wall of the house, owned by Loretta Grady. Police said Reinhard's head hit the windshield at the time of the crash.

He was listed in fair condition today at San Rafael General Hospital.

Kissing Bandit Captured

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The FBI reported today the arrest of Robert K. Winslow, 33, a Kissing Bandit who fled March 8 from the San Quentin conservation camp at Alder Creek.

He was serving a 5 year to life sentence for robbery and burglary.

Winslow, with a robbery record dating back to 1952, frequently kissed his victims.

The FBI said he had been employed as a carnival worker and wallboard paperer in Northern California since his escape.

Deaths By Red Hands Listed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson said yesterday 160,000 Americans have been killed or wounded in fighting against Communist forces since the close of World War II.

"But we did not allow Greece or Turkey or Iran or Formosa or Lebanon or others to fall to aggressors," he said, "and we don't plan to let up until the aggression ceases."

Johnson, who has said he feels a personal involvement with the U.S. casualties in combat zones, told newsmen that some 300 Americans have been killed in Viet Nam since he became President in November of 1963.

President Announces Shake-Up

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—The Texas White House announced today that President Johnson has accepted the resignations of Eugene M. Zuckert as secretary of the Air Force and of Carl Rowan as director of the U.S. Information Agency.

Zuckert's resignation will become effective Sept. 30. Appointed in January 1961, Zuckert has served longer than any previous Air Force secretary.

Rowan asked that his resignation become effective "at the earliest reasonable date," but has agreed to stay on indefinitely until his successor has been chosen.

Rowan said he expects to return to a career in journalism.

Rowan has risen higher in the federal government than any other Negro.

He formerly was a deputy assistant secretary of state for public affairs and ambassador to Finland.

Dr. Harold Brown, the Pentagon's director of defense research and engineering, will succeed Zuckert as Air Force secretary.

Reds Say Taylor Resigning In Fear

WARSAW, Poland (AP) —The Polish trade union newspaper Glos Pracy (Voice of Labor) suggested today Maxwell Taylor is resigning as U.S. ambassador to Saigon because his name heads the Viet Cong death list.

The paper said: "We do not want to impute lack of personal courage in face of the enemy to General Taylor, but it is hard to forget that his name was recently put at the head of the list of those sentenced to death by the South Vietnamese Liberation front(Viet Cong)."

SAIGON (UPI) — Two U. S. F4F Phantom jets shot down two Communist MIG17 jets with air-to-air missiles in a dogfight 65 miles northwest of Hanoi today, a U. S. military spokesman reported.

The 1,200-mile-per-hour Phantoms were flying cover for a flight of fighter-bombers attacking the Yong Sen ammunition depot when the pilots detected the enemy planes on radar.

The MIGs opened fire with cannons and the Phantoms returned the fire-launching air-to-air missiles which sent the Soviet-built planes down in flames.

The action came as American planes making their deepest penetration into Communist North Viet Nam destroyed two bridges 80 and 85 miles northwest of Hanoi.

A military spokesman reported earlier the American planes had sighted three MIGs near Hanoi but that the Communist planes had fled without a fight. Announcement of the dogfight came later.

The bridges destroyed today were about midway between Hanoi and the city of Lao Kay on the border of Communist China, on an important highway and railroad running through the Red River Valley which links Hanoi with Red China.

Loud Video Commercials Under Fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J., one of the more vocal opponents of loud television commercials, says the effect of a Federal Communications Commission (FCC) policy statement against the advertisements "remains to be seen, or rather heard."

The FCC is expected to issue the statement Monday. It would establish guidelines for broadcasters to follow in avoiding "objectionably loud commercials" — a subject sensitive to the eardrums of many viewers.

The statement will mark the first time the FCC, which controls the length and number of commercials, has moved against their volume.

The FCC, deluged with complaints from angry viewers in recent years, has found loud commercials to be "a substantial problem."

While no new rules are expected to be set up, the guidelines are sure to be read closely by broadcasters who depend on the commission for their licenses to stay in business.

Case, who has been demanding FCC action against noisy commercials for several years, said he hoped the guidelines would be followed by broadcasters.

Minutemen Chief Surrenders

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Robert B. DePugh, head of the Minutemen, surrendered yesterday on state charges of kidnaping.

DePugh

DePugh, 42, is accused of abducting two young women and attempting to enlist them in his militant, anti-Communist organization for the purpose of blackmail. He had been sought by police.

Before he surrendered, a search of DePugh's office and home at Norborne, Mo., and an office at Independence, Mo., uncovered arms, ammunition, a sub-machine gun, a mine and field equipment.

Lawrence F. Gepford, prosecuting attorney, said the two women signed statements saying that DePugh and a few of his followers held them captive for two weeks. The women said they escaped.

They were identified as Linda Frances Judd, 16, Independence, and Patricia Lucille Beal, 21, Lake Lotawana.

67,000 Strength

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — A U.S. military spokesman reported today that the strength of American military personnel in South Viet Nam as of Thursday was 67,000. The total was said to include 27,500 Army troops, 4,500 Navy men, 24,400 Marines and 10,500 Air Force men.

Viet Nam War 'To Get Worse'

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson, warning he expects the situation in Viet Nam to "get worse before it gets better," says the number of U. S. troops in the war will have to go above the announced goal of 75,000.

"Our manpower needs there are increasing and will continue to do so," Johnson told a news conference yesterday. "Whatever is required I am sure will be supplied."

There have been a number of reports recently that U.S. forces would be boosted beyond the goal of 75,000 announced June 18 by Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara. But the President's statement was the first official disclosure of an expected increase.

Johnson said the increased troop commitment would be required by the stepped up pace of the guerrilla war. He said Viet Cong forces were being increased and that they were making more and bigger attacks.

The Chief Executive gave no indication of how many troops he thought might eventually become involved, saying only that there are about 60,000 U. S. troops in South Viet Nam now and that the total would reach 75,000 shortly. Before the first Marines landed last March, there were only 23,500 U. S. troops on the scene.

"As other needs appear, we will promptly meet them," Johnson said.

"I have neither a rosy or gloomy report to make," he added. He said the power and national honor of the United States was committed to the struggle and the effort "will require understanding and endurance and patriotism."

Johnson also labelled as "irresponsible, inaccurate and untrue" speculation that Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor's resignation as U. S. ambassador to South Viet Nam had been caused by differences over policy.

"To assume that, you have to assume that neither the President nor General Taylor would tell the truth," said Johnson, referring to his exchange of letters with Taylor which indicated the general had asked when he was appointed June 24, 1964, to serve only for one year.

The President said that McNamara, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, and McGeorge Bundy, Johnson's national security adviser, had all agreed that Henry Cabot Lodge was the best possible man to succeed Taylor and had more knowledge of the problem than any other candidate.

Voting Rights Bill Passed By House

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson's voting rights bill moves now from the forge of the House floor to the anvil of a conference committee bargaining table.

The House bill, approved 333 to 85 last night after four days of debate, would strike down poll taxes and literacy tests and permit federal officials to register Negroes to vote in southern states.

Passage gave Johnson his second major legislative victory of the night. A short time earlier the Senate had approved a $7.5 billion welfare bill which included his medicare program. The President considers both measures key steps in the march to his Great Society.

The voting rights bill was passed with the support of 221 Democrats and 112 Republicans on the final vote. Sixty - one Democrats and 24 Republicans opposed it.

Before the final vote the House also rejected, 248 to 171, a substitute bill offered by GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford, Mich., and Rep. William M. McCulloch, Ohio.

Voting apparently reflected some southern support for an appeal from the Democratic Whip Hale Boggs, La., who last year voted against the civil rights bill.

Boggs received a standing ovation with a dramatic announcement that this time he was supporting the administration measure "because I believe in the fundamental right of Americans to vote."

The final bill was close to the measure approved by the Senate May 26 except for the outright ban on poll taxes. The Senate provided for a court test of poll taxes, the approach favored by the administration.

LBJ Has Victory On Medicare Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Johnson's medicare program, the most far-reaching health and welfare program since the advent of Social Security a generation ago, today was but a single step from enactment.

The Senate approved a $7.5 billion version of the administration's welfare bill last night on a 68 to 21 vote. Its passage was the first part of a triumphant legislative doubleheader which saw the House pass Johnson's voting rights bill a short time later.

The President, spending the weekend on his Texas ranch, issued a statement which said the 22-year battle for a health care program for elderly persons was now "certain of swift and historic victory."

"A great burden will be lifted from the shoulders of all Americans," Johnson said. He said the legislation will bring peace of mind to the elderly,

During the final day of debate the Senate turned back three Republican attempts to gut the bill by removing the health insurance provisions. On the final vote, 55 Democrats and 13 Republicans voted for the bill against 14 Republicans and 7 Democrats.

The one step remaining before enactment of the program is a House - Senate conference committee, which must iron out the differences between the $7.5 billion Senate bill and the $6 billion measure passed by the House April 8.

Merchants Troubled By Garbage

The Merchants Council of the Corte Madera Shopping Center has garbage trouble, and wants the Town of Corte Madera to do something about it.

"Twice recently the garbage collection at a large store on the center has been stopped, apparently without warning from the Mill Valley Refuse Service, Inc.," Attorney Richard G. Burns, representing the council, said yesterday.

"The refuse collector has ignored the rate agreement negotiated last year with the help of former town manager Art Brandow, he charged.

Burns said Corte Madera's garbage collection ordinance simply states commercial garbage collection rates "shall be such reasonable rates" as fixed by agreements between the company and various businesses.

The merchants council would like to see the town set uniform rates on the basis of quantity of garbage and frequency of collections.

Moreover, claimed Burns, "Careful surveys of other comparable stores in the Bay Area reveal that the Mill Valley Refuse Co.'s charges for garbage collection in the center are far out of line."

death for killing in connection with a bank holdup.

The five-day manhunt ended yesterday with the capture and swift arraignment of the two desperadoes.

Bowles and Gray, both recently released from the Oregon State Penitentiary, surrendered meekly before dawn Friday to two highway patrolmen on a sagebrush plateau near the Nevada line in central California.

Within nine hours after their capture, they were flown to Sacramento and arraigned in federal court on charges of kidnaping the Champions.

Coupled with warrants for kidnaping and bank robbery in Oregon, the bail for the two was set at $250,000 apiece.

Stinson Water Budget Drops

The Stinson Beach Water District board this morning passed a fiscal 1966 budget of $7,060, a drop of $1,050 from last year's budget.

Director Hugh Dougherty explained that the district is now in between engineering surveys, which are its major cost, thus enabling the trustees to pass a lower budget.

The board, he said, hopes to participate in a sewage study of the Bolinas-Stinson Beach watershed in a cooperative venture with the public utilities districts of Bolinas and Bolinas Beach, and with the County of Marin.

The board will meet next at 10 a.m. Aug. 14 in the Stinson Beach Community Center.

Construction Strike Progress Is Made

Marin County Painters and Cement Masons continued their strikes today, although union officials said progress had been made in the signing of interim contracts.

Painters Local 83 has now signed more than 30 such contracts calling for a wage increase of 50 cents an hour, to $5.12, reported financial secretary Ernest Kennedy.

"We are seeking the same increase on a permanent basis," he said.

Painters have refused to work on projects not covered by interim agreement. They have declined to picket, however.

Cement masons, today were still picketing the McGraw-Hill Book Co. building in Novato and the new Dominican Upper and Lower School campus in Sleepy Hollow.

N. C. Green, business representative for Cement Masons Local 335, said yesterday that more than 30 firms had met interim demands.

Meanwhile, strikes throughout Northern California continued to idle between 35,000 and 40,000 workers, although several Bay Area unions came to terms with employers yesterday.

Settlements came with San Francisco sheet metal workers, South San Francisco and Berkeley tannery butchers, Alameda and Contra Costa County steamfitters, and San Mateo County plumbers.

Northern California strikes continued for cement masons, painters, bridge, wharf and dock builders, and Alameda County plumbers.

8 Property Assessments Adjusted

Marin County supervisors, sitting for the second day as a board of equalization yesterday, adjusted eight of 11 property assessments on which they heard pleas.

They made two major adjustments, cutting from $9,200 to $5,490 the unsecured property assessment for T. L. Schoonmaker Co. in Sausalito, and from $31,050 to $18,520 the unsecured property assessment for United Sand and Gravel Co. on the same property.

County assessor Bert W. Broemmel concurred in both reductions.

Other reductions made by the board were in small amounts.

Equalization hearings will continue at 9 a.m. Monday.

Deadline for filing petitions to protest assessment is 5 p.m. next Wednesday. They must be filed at the civic center where forms are available.

So far, 97 protests have been filed.

Wolfback Ridge Road Being Guarded Again

A private guard was stationed once again today at the entrance to Wolfback Ridge Road in Sausalito as members of the Wolfback Ridge Assn. continued their effort to keep the public out of the area.

John Peter Erickson, president of the group, said the guard turned back nearly 300 people last weekend. The group hopes to prevent construction of a four lane, 80 foot wide highway, now mapped as a major entrance to the proposed community of Marincello.

Those planes were believed flown by North Vietnamese although American jets tangled with Chinese Communist MIGs near Hainan island on another occasion. One U. S. plane was lost and Peking said it was shot down by a missile from one of the American planes.

Early in the air war two other American jets were shot down when slower MIGs pounced on the heavily laden fighter-bombers from a cloud cover.

Hope Dims For Kidnaped Girl

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Hope dimmed today for the safe return of a 9-year-old girl as police and FBI intensified their search for the former mental patient believed to have kidnaped her from her grandparents motel.

The grandparents identified Robert Lee Hays from a picture as the man they believe abducted freckle-faced Denise Clinton after robbing the motel. Hays was also wanted by the FBI for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution in connection with a robbery at Topeka, Kan. The FBI joined the kidnap case Friday after Denise was missing for more than 24 hours.

She was kidnaped by the bandit early Thursday morning after he took $256 from the motel cash register.

On hand also will be her parents, the Raymond Hornbys of Kentfield, who are just back from the mountains, and the David Plants of San Francisco, formerly of Marin.

OTHER PARTIES for Marin debutantes that have been added to the summer calendar include a luncheon July 22 honoring Brenda Daly, given by her aunt, Mrs. Carlton Mathewson of San Francisco; a luncheon at the Beach Club at Peacock Gap Country Club for Jean Manwaring and Gail Noah hostessed by Mrs. Fred Herrington of Ross and Mrs. Wallace Scott of Belvedere; and a luncheon for Kristin Pflueger given by Mrs. James Crittenden and Mrs. Richard Blake at the Crittenden home in Belvedere.

Check Skirt Length Often When Using A New Pattern

By EUNICE FARMER

I have a very unexpected tunic dress because I didn't measure my pattern. I thought that if I wrote you, it might save others from my mistake. I haven't added to the length of patterns for years, even though I am rather tall. Suddenly, when I finished my latest dress, it was too short. Nothing to do but to make it a tunic by adding an underskirt to extend about 3 inches below the tunic.

MRS. E. R.

DEAR MRS. E. R.:

Thanks for sending this worthy bit of advice. As we all know, skirts have been getting shorter for the last several years. Often we keep using old patterns over again and aren't aware of this. Suddenly, a new pattern with the latest length surprises us and we find out we should have added additional length. It's best to check the length of the skirt occasionally to avoid this very thing.

I am trying to learn to sew on my own and I find your column interesting. Can you suggest anything that will make learning to sew a little easier?

MARY M.

DEAR MARY M.:

First, I would begin with the simplest pattern available for either a blouse or a shift dress. When you have mastered this go on to something more difficult. Perhaps you are trying to figure out instructions without the practical part of actually doing it.

One of the most attractive accessories I have seen in a long time was worn at a formal dinner recently. It simply made the gal's ensemble come to life. She had made a stole out of the most beautiful printed silk and wore it with a solid colored gown.

Actually, a stole of this type could be worn with a long or short dress and could be used to pick up almost any color. Try to get a print of some bold, exotic color and you'll get lots of compliments.

The stole can be almost any length that would look good for your height; I would say it should be approximately 2 yards long and about 18 inches wide. The edges can be completely ruffled around all four sides. This gal's stole's ruffles were a double fold about 3 inches wide and the folded edges of the ruffles were unpressed. The stole was made of double layer of fabric. Try it and let me known how you liked it.

Why not keep an indexed notebook and try to catalogue the information I give you in the proper place. Then, when the situation comes up for you, follow my instructions step-by-step and you can't help but understand. Whatever you do, remember to be patient and keep your sense of humor when sewing. Also, if you have a failure, just mark it up to experience. Remember — all of us have dresses hanging in the closet that we bought and never wore more than once.

I followed your instructions for making the Chinese ball buttons and they turned out fine, however, I can't seem to get them to look like balls. What am I doing wrong?

MRS. L. T. T.

DEAR MRS. L. T. T.:

After you have woven the tubing for the buttons correctly, you will have to work with them a little longer until you have shaped them into balls. This will require pulling part of the tubing tighter and making part of it looser. It just takes a little time and is well worth it. Remember, when making buttonholes for these buttons, the buttonholes must be about ½ inch longer than usual to allow enough room for the round buttons.

Mrs. Florence Harris, Royal Oak, Mich., is this week's winner of a Tailor Trix pressing board for this suggestion.

"A slit at the back or side of a skirt will never tear if you sew the straight eye from the conventional hook and eye set across the end of the seam where the slit begins. This should be sewed on the wrong side of the skirt."

I have found this works beautifully if used across the lower end of the teeth of the zippers on skirts and shorts. It will prevent the zipper from pulling out if it is strained slightly.

If you would like instructions for making Chinese ball buttons, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope with 10 cents to Sew Simple, in care of The Independent-Journal. Ask for leaflet 4, "Spaghetti Straps and Rope Belts."

Lt. Steinke May Make U.S. Look Soft To Others

All of us have heard that from time to time over the years and we are inclined to agree there is some basis for the statement, but we are confident that deep down inside there is strength which, when the occasion warrants, will make itself evident.

The Imperial Japanese high command in the fall of 1941 made the fatal mistake of believing Americans were too soft to fight. We all paid for their mistake. The Russians at times have shown signs of making the same terrible mistake.

IT IS EASY TO SEE how the idea that America and Americans are growing soft.

Look at Lieutenant Richard R. Steinke, the West Point graduate who refused to obey an order assigning him to duty in Viet Nam.

If he were a draftee, it might be understandable.

If he were some "90-day-wonder" reservist, it might in some way be explainable.

But for a West Pointer to refuse to obey an order to serve his country, it is almost unbelievable.

BREATHES THERE a combat veteran who would not applaud the words of Marine Corporal Henry Bacich who wrote from Viet Nam of Lieut. Steinke, "Don't people know another man had to take his place!"

Corporal Bacich is only 19 and a high school dropout but already he has learned well the soldier's code: "Ours not to reason why; our's but to do or die."

The Marine Corps' gallant history has been written in blood by men who "did their duty" with almost suicidal fanaticism.

Despite his West Point education, Lieut. Steinke apparently is oblivious to the toast of Stephen Decatur, "Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country right or wrong."

What Stephen Decatur meant was that whether they agree with what our nation's leaders are trying to do, or not, members of the armed forces carry out their orders.

A COURT MARTIAL convicted Lieut. Steinke of disobeying the orders to serve in Viet Nam. In wartime, this would be a capital offense.

All they did with Lieut. Steinke was oust him from the service and take away any pay to which he might otherwise have been entitled.

SINCE ALMOST immediately after World War II we have been locked in mortal struggle with the forces of conquest-bent totalitarian communism. We call it cold war.

We won a defensive victory in Korea, showing the Reds we weren't as soft as they had wishfully hoped.

Now we are engaged in a similar struggle in Viet Nam. It looks like a defensive engagement, where we can't win anything much but we can lose too much.

We have no alternative but to hold firm.

Benedict Arnold's place in American history henceforth will have to be shared not only with the "turn-coats" of Korea but with the West Point graduate who refused to serve his country in Viet Nam. They all thought our country was wrong and they let that belief lead them into contemptible actions.

—Jack Craemer

The Many Headed Flower

The Hydrangea gets its name from the mythological Hydra—the many headed monster of the ancient world.

Some of the flower clusters are human head size; some are even bigger. Marin is good Hydrangea country. It is not too hot or too cold, and the summers are largely cool and touched with dampness. Hydrangeas wilt quickly in hot weather and require frequent watering to survive.

Pink or blue or purple—the color depends largely upon the acidity or alkalinity of the soil, so we are told. Rusty nails mixed into the dirt around these plants is a favorite color-changing nostrum for this living litmus paper.

Bouquets And Brickbats

A BOUQUET to Mrs. Ernest A. Evans who recently attended the 70th annual reunion of her class at Mount Holyoke College in Massachusetts. At 91, she marched in the alumnae parade. Nothing old-fashioned about her; she took the helicopter from Sausalito to San Francisco International Airport to catch her plane east for the reunion.

BOUQUETS to pianist Claudia Leigh Jacobs and clarinetist Lois Marie Clymer, joint winners of this year's Marin Symphony Guild $500 scholarship for further study of music.

BRICKBATS to drivers who follow the car ahead too closely. These impatient ones are a major cause of accidents.

A BOUQUET to Dennis Silva, the teen-age San Rafael boy elected state chaplain of the Sons of the American Legion.

A BOUQUET to Dan Davis, whose list of credits for volunteer community service in Marin is endless, installed as new president of the San Rafael Rotary club.

BRICKBATS to the TV networks that interrupt athletic contest broadcasts with commercial announcements. One network has agreed with a college athletic organization to curtail such artificial interruptions. Now, if only TV would cut out the hypocrisy of "officials' time out" for commercials during pro football games, they would rate a bouquet instead of another brickbat.

PARENTS HAVE BASIC RESPONSIBILITY

The legal phrase "in loco parentis" (meaning "in the place of the parent") is commonly applied to schoolmasters and guardians. It sums up their role concisely but clearly.

The best of teachers can only act in behalf of fathers and mothers in educating their sons and daughters. He can never adequately replace them.

In God's plan, the primary responsibility for the physical, intellectual and spiritual development of the child rests with the parent. This means that the home is the first and most important school.

But it also signifies that parents should make common cause with teachers to whom they entrust a major part of the training of their children.

Achievement in the classroom, as well as in later life, depends to a large extent on how conscientiously a student tackles his homework. It is important therefore that parents cooperate with teachers in developing good out-of-class study habits in their children.

"Train a boy in the way he should go; even when he is old, he will not swerve from it."
(Proverbs 22:6)

Help me, O Father, to do whatever I can to strengthen the bond between parents and teachers.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Mill Valley Official Pay Hike Challenged

Editor, Independent-Journal:

It is with more than a little interest that I read in tonight's paper (July 8) the report on the meeting of the Mill Valley City Council. While I am not now a taxpayer in the boundaries of the City of Mill Valley, I live in an area which may soon be annexed (like it or not).

There seemed to be a great effort made to try to eliminate certain things which might cut the budget and subsequently the tax rate. The city manager stated that the budget included a two and one-half per cent across-the-board salary increase for city employees.

On the same page of this edition appears an article, stating in bold headlines, that Bert Balmer, city manager of Mill Valley was granted a $750 salary increase. According to my arithmetic, this comes to 4.9 per cent of his present salary. In the 18 months that Mr. Balmer has been employed by the city, his salary has increased a total of 28 per cent. FOR WHAT? Stealing a phrase from the late Will Rogers, "All I know is what I read in the papers."

Was Mr. Balmer there to help move dirt or drive nails for the youth center at Project 17? Does he help sweep the streets or are they any cleaner now than before? Does he have any direct responsibility for the excellent law enforcement and fire protection? Or—is this increase in salary (almost double that of the real workers) due only to his ability to threaten a subordinate with an ash tray to the head?

I would like some real answers as to why this man is entitled to so much money of the taxpayers' hard-earned dollar. To make matters worse, Mr. Balmer has not even been a taxpayer in the City of Mill Valley in the time that he has been employed there.

Twin City Library Problems Compared

Editor, Independent-Journal:

As a property owner and taxpayer in both Larkspur and Corte Madera, the schedule of assessed valuations as published (July 2) was of great interest to me.

Assuming the rate of 15 cents per $100 assessed valuation for the library tax in the City of Corte Madera, the projected revenue will be $26,957.73. The one-half cent per hundred dedicated to the purchase of the square footage occupied by the County Library at the Civic Center would reduce this by $898.59, leaving a net for operational expense of some $26,000. The 1966-67 fiscal year should complete the obligation for the space in the Civic Center. As of now, the Corte Madera branch library is housed in inadequate quarters. The library is sadly understaffed; the librarian and her page are overworked. As a result, over 1,000 Corte Madera residents have cards in the Larkspur library.

Larkspur has a fine library of which we are justifiably proud. The operating budget for the 1965-66 fiscal year is $16,300. We need larger quarters to expand our services and facilities, and hope to build a new library in the near future.

I feel that Corte Madera is not getting value received for their tax money. In view of the use made of the Larkspur library by Corte Madera residents, it might be well for Corte Madera to explore withdrawal from the county library system and either establish a consolidated library in a site readily available to residents from both towns, or to use the Larkspur facilities on a use/lease basis.

De Gaulle Stand Raises Common Market Worries

By PHIL NEWSOM
U. P. International

Since the European Common Market became a working reality on Jan. 1, 1959, it has become for its six member nations a way of life and for the rest of the world an economic force of tremendous power.

Its members, France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg, compose a mass market of 180 million people.

AND AS IT STROVE to reduce internal tariff barriers to zero on both industry and agriculture, it provide the impetus to give Western Europe an unheard-of prosperity.

The Common Market itself was the outgrowth of another common market established in 1951.

This was the European coal and steel community, the brain-child of the French foreign minister, Maurice Schuman.

With the same membership as the present Common Market, it was part of Schuman's thinking that a tightly knit industrial complex based on coal and steel would make it impossible for France and Germany ever again to go to war against each other.

ITS SUCCESS LED to the treaty of Rome in 1957 with an even greater goal. It proposed not only the economic integration of Western Europe but political unity as well. It came into being in 1959.

It established a commission in Brussels for day-to-day direction of market operations, a council of ministers to establish policy and a largely powerless parliament of Europe headquarters at Strasbourg.

Successful economically, Common Market efforts toward political unity haven't even gotten off the ground.

For this, his five partners blame French President Charles de Gaulle.

An interim agreement on the financing of Common Market farm programs ran out on June 30.

France's partners propose that approximately $2.3 billion collected in customs duties annually be placed in a common fund and be distributed under direction of the commission in Brussels to pay various farm subsidies.

AS THE LARGEST agricultural producer among the six, France stands to gain the most from agricultural agreement.

But because it does mean a surrender of authority, de Gaulle will have none of it.

Long-Impossible Actions Now Come Easy To This Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — At another time what Congress is doing now would be wrapped in breathless attention and conflict. But success feeds on itself, and in these peculiar days what seemed impossible now seems routine.

This is a busy Congress and, before this session is over, will have been a highly productive one. However, public interest has been distracted by the war in Viet Nam and the personality of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

IN GETTING Congress to trot along with him, Johnson has had two things working for him: His own endless pressure on the men in the Capitol and the fact that his own Democrats thoroughly outnumber the Republicans.

And there is not now in Congress a controversial figure—like Senators Joseph McCarthy, Robert A. Taft or Barry Goldwater—who splits public thinking and, while getting attention himself, draws attention to Congress.

From a presidential standpoint this probably is an ideal Congress: Legislators who for the most part stick to their knitting, don't fuss much and grind out the legislation.

Besides all this, some of the most important legislation moving through Congress this year was fought over wildly or loudly so many times before it lost its edge.

Two examples: Federal aid to grade and high schools, passed earlier this year; and medicare, which will almost certainly go through.

THERE WAS hardly a ripple when Congress only Tuesday completed what no Congress in history ever managed to do before:

This was approval, by the House last week and the Senate Tuesday, of a proposed constitutional amendment spelling out procedures to deal with presidential disability and to keep the vice presidency filled.

This won't become part of the Constitution until at least 38 state legislatures also approve; but they're expected to without any trouble, although not before 1967. Action on this was a major achievement in itself.

Before Congress took its Fourth of July vacation, it already had passed—in addition to the school aid bill — two other top Johnson programs: reduction in federal excise taxes and aid to the Appalachia area.

As soon as it returned Tuesday, after clearing the proposed amendment, the Senate went to work on the Social Security-health care bill. This would raise Social Security benefits and set up health care programs for those 65 or older.

THE HOUSE got down to work in a hurry, too. It opened debate on the 1965 civil rights bill—to protect Negroes' voting rights — although on this there will be some struggle.

Nevertheless, in one form or another, it seems sure to pass. The Senate previously had approved a similar measure, just as the House previously had approved its version of the medicare bill now before the Senate.

Further, Congress also is almost certain to approve an urban affairs department, a $5.3 billion housing bill, and aid to higher education.

JOHNSON HAS suffered some limited rebuffs, and before Congress quits for the year he may suffer some defeats on what he has asked; but, as it shapes up, the record of this Congress will be impressive and remembered.

BARKER ON CHINA

U.S. Couldn't Win War Against Peking

By GEORGE BARKER

IF THE WAR in Viet Nam continues to escalate and the U.S. drifts closer and closer to war with Red China, it might be wise for our strategy planners in Washington to reappraise the situation. We seem to be underestimating our enemy, as has been standard U.S. practice since before Pearl Harbor.

We are told that from the point of view of logistics the United States is closer to Viet Nam than China because of the Eastern Himalayas which, although much lower than those on the China-India border, would be an effective barrier against mass movement of Chinese troops and supplies; that only one highway and one railroad line presently connects the two countries of North Viet Nam and China. We seem to conveniently forget that China faced much more formidable odds in terms of terrain and weather when she inflicted her humiliating defeat on India.

We overlook the fact that, in case of an all-out war in which we would bomb Chinese cities and industries, China would pull out all the corks, too. She would probably reopen the war in Korea, calling for U.S. reinforcements on that embattled peninsula. She might move against India, where she could engage more of our forces. She would likely sweep through Laos and engage us in Thailand. We've built fine military roads in Laos, in all probability. Quemoy and Matsu would go quickly after a great slaughter on both sides. Hong Kong would go within a week, if the Reds should decide it was worthwhile. We could find ourselves up to our ears in war fronts.

BEYOND BLOWING up China's industries and nuclear facilities, what could we do? Invade? Heaven help us if we try. China has one of the world's most difficult terrains. Eighty or 90 per cent of its population lives in largely self-sufficient villages. We could grab her important cities, as the Japanese did in World War II, and still not have conquered the country. And the toll in terms of death and suffering on both sides would be incalculable.

Statemate would be inevitable. And there are the imponderables. What would Russia do? Will defeating China's ambitions in Southeast Asia drive her into the Soviet bear-hug? Should we use nuclear weapons on China? Is it moral for the world's most powerful nation to bomb, conventionally or with nuclear weapons, such a backward, far-away country?

For my part, I want nothing to do wth inflicting more suffering on the Chinese people, who have suffered so much during the past four decades. It seems to me that, if we soft-pedal our response to Mao Tse-tung and his gang, be firm but not aggressive, China will soften from within as the younger generation rises. The new generation is being weaned on militancy. But it has not been tempered by battle. It is doubtful how much of Mao's support is genuine.

BUT IF WE ATTACK the Fatherland, then we might expect every Chinese who could not be bought to be against us.

Viet Cong Guerrilla Force Survives Deep In Jungle

Methods Keep Them Alive, Moving Around To Fight

(EDITOR'S NOTE: How is the Viet Cong able to do it? How can a guerrilla force survive the onslaught of modern weapons and go on to fight another day? Here is a study of guerrilla methods in Viet Nam, reported by a correspondent whose four years in the war area have given him many chances to observe Viet Cong methods.)

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

SAIGON (AP)—You can pretty well reconstruct the way the Viet Cong operates:

A small brown man squats underground in an improvised echo chamber, straining his ears for the slightest sound.

Naked except for black shirts, a long rice pouch over one shoulder and a belt slung with hand grenades, he had been squatting patiently for hours.

It is nearly dark in the chamber, except for daylingt streaming through the sound slots around the top. Through these slots, the first sounds come, reflecting from the curved sides of the chamber and amplifying at the man's ears. Then the distant thudding of helicopter rotor blades.

The man, wriggling through a short tunnel to the surface, can yell an alarm. Instantly, shadowy men lounging or cooking at the bases of the tall trees are on their feet and moving fast. The heavy equipment from last night's battle has been stowed for future use in deep, camouflaged holes. The bodies have been buried.

The men move rapidly, scattering in many directions in twos and threes. This is their base area, and they know every feature of the dense jungle in the area—the hidden trails, the camouflaged bunkers and tunnels, the gun emplacements, the mines and booby traps.

Viet Cong positions were first prepared here years ago and with each month the positions have been improved.

The entrance to a tunnel might be under a heavy rock, it might be under the hearth of a peasant's hut, it might be under water in the bank of a mountain stream. Only by sheer luck would a government soldier find one, and if he did, he probably would kill only a few Viet Cong. The rest would be elsewhere.

In the case of bombings a jellied furnace of napalm would ooze down into some of the air holes. But many of the bunkers would be deep enough to survive even direct hits by heavy bombs, and their galleries of men and weapons would survive. At nightfall, it would be safe to move around again.

Nearly always, the Viet Cong will know what to expect, long in advance.

The warning may come from the echo chamber. It may come in a radio message from a comrade miles away. It may come from peasant in the area, who either fear the Viet Cong or are more or less on the Viet Cong side. It may come from a bar girl who was drinking with government or American troops the night before.

The South Vietnamese haul men and cannon and gear in trucks as far as they can, or use helicopters that may be limited in their landing zones to a few clear patches in the jungle. The guerrilla almost always will move overland, toting everything he needs on his back, and skirting the roads, unless he wants to ambush them.

When the government forces are finished for the day, they probably will move to some safer area before nightfall. Night belongs to the guerrilla.

In the jungle, the wilderness itself is the guerrilla's best friend. In the cities and towns, the guerrillas' best camouflage is people. A guerrilla terrorist in a crowded city looks no different than hundreds of thousands of other youths.

END OF LINE—South Vietnamese soldier uses end of dagger to administer punishment to captured Viet Cong guerrilla who looks like any Viet Nam farmer. And deep in wilderness of jungle many more Viet Cong await nightfall to strike. (AP Wirephoto)

Mariner May Change Maps Made Of Mars

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press Writer

The present-day map of Mars is as accurate as present knowledge allows, but take it with a grain of salt.

No camera has photographed, no human eye has seen the details shown on the map all at one time. Our maps of Mars are a composite of photographs and sketches made by astronomers at many different places, over scores of years.

Many astronomers have spent a lifetime looking at Mars with the best telescopes—and never have seen any of the network of "canals" and "oases" shown on some maps. Equally reputable astronomers have seen them many times.

Some say this network is evidence of intelligent life on Mars. Others hunt less imaginative explanations.

If all goes well, Mariner 4 will take 21 pictures as close as 6,000 miles when it flies past Mars on Wednesday. Until that time, all maps of the mysterious red planet must be based on a few known details—plus a lot of guesswork, tinged with hope.

The known details, photographed hundreds of times, are the white caps at the poles and ragged dark areas extending from them toward the equator.

Mars maps usually show, however, a vast network of lines stretching from the dark areas across a light-colored region girdling the planet, and smudges where the lines intersect.

The lines and smudges have never been clearly photographed. They have been sketched in, a few at a time, by astronomers staring long hours through telescopes during nights when Mars is closest to earth. Even then, Mars is more than 34 million miles away.

The sketches were made under admittedly poor conditions, with the astronomers hurriedly drawing rough outlines in virtual darkness while perched in observatory domes, and few match when superimposed. Coordinates may differ up to several hundred miles. Making them agree sometimes takes a certain amount of guesswork—mapmakers call it cartographic ingenuity.

The latest U.S. Air Force maps are drawn with a resolution of three kilometers, which means they show details as small as two miles across. This is the resolution hoped for in Mariner 4's photographs.

This resolution would be 100 times better than the best earth-based photographs and some 50 times better than telescope-aided human vision. Since some of the lines or canals on the Air Force maps are less than two miles wide, a bit of guesswork is obvious.

The integrity of these visual observations has never been doubted. Skeptics simply say they personally have never been able to see canals and oases and suggest (1) that the human eye, while sometimes sharper than a camera, is subject to illusion, and (2) that the human spirit has long yearned for some evidence of fellowship in the cosmic void.

Despite the controversy, astronomers generally have accepted the visually observed features enough to give them names, following a system laid down by Giovanni Virginio Schiaparelli of Milan Observatory. Schiaparelli, first to report seeing the lines, called them "canali," which can be translated either as canals or grooves. He published a map in 1877 using names from the Bible and classical mythology, and astronomers since have followed this system. These names were adopted officially by the International Astronomical Union in 1958.

Schiaparelli and other early astronomers thought the dark areas might be seas so they called them maria, the Latin word for seas, and sinuses, meaning bays.

One of the more prominent seas, Mare Sirenum, just below the Martian equator, is a primary target of Mariner 4's camera.

Unlike earth's land and sea masses, none of the Martian features is permanent in size and shape. The polar caps grow in winter and shrink in summer, giving rise to speculation that they may be ice.

The dark areas turn greenish in spring, brown in summer and fall. Some grow enormously in area—a characteristic also of a few canals and oases. These changes have been taken as an indication that the dark areas are vegetation, fed by water from melting ice caps.

All these theories were based on the supposition that Mars had water and oxygen—necessary for life as we know it. Recent studies of light reflected from Mars show only a trace of water and no oxygen so most scientists now believe that if Mars harbors any kind of life it must be in the form of microscopic organisms.

What about those "canals"?

Mariner 4 may change a lot of ideas, and a lot of maps.

Talking Freeways Era Around Corner

SACRAMENTO — The era of freeways that talk to drivers may be almost at hand, the California Division of Highways has announced.

Certain ethereal qualities seemed involved in tests, for participating drivers suddenly began to hear a voice emanating from no logical source that advised them of traffic hazards they would encounter within the next few miles.

But the source of the information was quite prosaic. Test automobiles were equipped with an antenna-amplifier-speaker combination, and this small electronic packet was picking up radiations from a near-by tape recorder that was feeding a message into a copper wire looped around a 700-foot section of freeway.

The theory of augmenting with sound the visual traffic signs most drivers rely on for information is neither new nor is it that had been buried along the original with the California Division of Highways. Such signs have been the prime means of imparting on-the-spot information to passing travelers since at least the time of the Romans.

But in the era of increasing speeds, restricted-access highways and massive traffic volumes the driver's environment has been drastically altered.

The distractions that compete with traffic signs are almost endless.

The tests were triggered by a Senate resolution, the intent of which was that ways should be found and put into practice for warning drivers of the need to observe caution when driving during periods of reduced visibility. A second objective was to warn drivers, whose visual range is shortened because of fog or other abnormal circumstances, that an accident has occurred.

Either situation is most difficult to overcome with a sign, for not only would it have to differ radically in concept from those in general use today, it would also have to be one that could be energized on short notice.

These were the obstacles that led to the exploitation of the long known principles of electro-magnetic induction with the ultimate aim of making highways talk to people.

The site of the tests was a stretch of Route 160 north of Sacramento. The 700-foot length of the test area was arbitrarily selected because that happened to be the distance between a culvert and an over-crossing that made ideal boundaries. A nearby utility pole made a convenient location for the ground equipment and the lines it carried were tapped to supply electric power needed to energize the system.

The roadside transmitting equipment consisted of a tape recorder feeding a pre-recorded message into an audio amplifier. The amplified output was then fed into the loop of wire roadway, and a magnetic field, varying in accordance with the message, was thus set up in the vicinity of the loop.

The companion equipment installed in test vehicles consisted of a small magnetic pickup coil in which a varying current was caused to flow by the magnetic field from the roadside transistorized amplifier and loop. This signal was fed into a transistorized amplifier and then to a loudspeaker that relayed the recorded message to the car.

The potential of a refined system is almost without limits.

By installing the wires when new freeways are built, connecting the two sides at one mile intervals and installing a transmitting device, a trans-state freeway theoretically could be wired for sound along its entire length.

In an emergency situation, where such a network existed, a California Highway Patrolman on the scene could combine his two-way radio and the telephone connection to dictate a message into specific loops that in turn could warn drivers of impending danger.

The reception of messages transmitted through the system can be controlled to very precise areas by specific placement of the wire loop.

No News Good News In Session For Holding Line On Education

BY EDWIN S. CAPPS
(Last in a Series)

SACRAMENTO—(CNS) — No news was good news for the higher echelons of the public educational world during the 1965 session of the California legislature.

Perhaps the biggest activity in the legislature this year in education was a holding action against attempts to change or weaken the Unruh education act of 1964.

The act provided a bonus of $15 per student in average daily attendance (ADA) in unified districts. It also provided that, in unification elections which were successful, the elementary districts which voted for the proposal would receive the $15 bonus just the same.

A number of attempts have been made to make more than one unified district out of a high school district. But the state board of education, which must approve unification plans, has failed to approve any.

As there was an undercurrent of the unification controversy throughout the session, so also was there similar shading from the disturbances at the University of California Berkeley campus, as far as higher education was concerned.

The latter culminated near the end of the session with adoption of a joint resolution of the two houses calling for a thorough study of the whole higher education system, including the university, state colleges and junior colleges.

The assembly education committee handled a total of 655 bills—or more than 10 per cent of all the bills introduced.

Probably the main accomplishments were in the area of compensatory education. This plan for providing extra school help for students from poor neighborhoods was started as a pilot program in 1963, for $300,000 a year. SB482-McAteer, approved this year, makes the program a full-time one. It provides $2 million in state money, which will qualify California for $73 million in federal funds.

SB205-Miller provides additional funds for basic reading teachers to "help give Johnny and Jane a running start," and AB1331-Unruh, provides $2 million in state funds (to be matched by $6 million federal) next year to take effect, would lower the requirement for approval of school district bonds from two thirds to 60 per cent, provided the election was held along with a general or primary election.

Opponents of lowering the requirement for bond approval feared the regular school elections turn out only 20 per cent of the voters and, under a lower requirement, the bonds could be approved by only a small minority of the voters. However, primary and general elections produce bigger voter turnouts. to set up pre-school centers in impoverished areas.

Lodge Going Back To Viet Nam

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

While armies clashed in Viet Nam, diplomats moved in various ways to find a formula capable of putting out the Southeast Asian fire.

Henry Cabot Lodge, an old South Viet Nam hand, was appointed ambassador to that beleaguered country, replacing Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor.

Lodge had preceded Taylor in the difficult post and it was no secret that Lodge had enjoyed better relations with the Vietnamese government.

But Taylor's resignation was not attributed to any pressure or change of administration policy. Taylor, a former chief of staff, pointed out that at the time of his appointment he asked to serve no more than one year.

Observers in Saigon said that a diplomat was taking over at a time when the soldier's job appeared to be finished.

On another level, U.N. Secretary General U Thant suggested that certain steps be taken for the sake of "peace and stability" in Viet Nam.

He called for a cease-fire to be followed by a conference in Geneva "to discuss very seriously methods of implementing the agreements reached in 1954."

Thant said he had presented his proposals to U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Adlai Stevenson in Geneva, French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve De Murville in Paris and British Prime Minister Harold Wilson in London.

The U.N. chieftain said he had received no "official reaction" to his proposals because the governments involved "have to take time to discuss the full implications of the proposal."

A move this week by British Prime Minister Wilson also could conceivably have a far reaching effect on the conduct of the Viet Nam conflict.

Around The World Around The Clock

Saigon—The bloody battle on the ground in South Viet Nam continued unabated. U.S. Marines and paratroopers fought Viet Cong guerrillas on their own as well as with their South Vietnamese comrades-in-arms.

Washington — In a news conference yesterday President Johnson repeated this country's determination to continue pressing forward in South Viet Nam until "the Communist aggression ceases." He announced that 75,000 men and more if necessary were committed to preserving South Viet Nam's freedom.

Washington—The discovery of Russian built missile sites in North Viet Nam evoked a call for their destruction by bombing from House GOP leader Gerald R. Ford. Administration spokesmen said the problem would be dealt with "at the proper time."

Washington—The administration's social security-medicare bill was approved by the Senate and now goes to committee to iron out differences with the House-approved version. And Johnson's voting rights bill was given House approval and also goes to a conference committee.

Sacramento—Two desperadoes went on a five-day crime spree through three states. The gunmen, captured by highway patrolmen on a sagebrush plateau face charges of rape, bank robbery, murder and kidnaping.

Give Up Trick To Prevent Ruff When Playing Bridge

When you deliberately give an unnecessary trick to an opponent you should have a good idea of how you will get the trick back.

As a rule, you trade a trick in one suit so that you won't have to lose a trick in some other suit.

Opening lead — ♡ Q

East won the first trick with the king of hearts and shifted to the jack of diamonds, pretty clearly a singleton.

ROUTING DEFENSE

East saw that routine defense would limit him to one spade and two hearts; the best chance to defeat the contract was to play for a diamond ruff.

South saw what would happen if he played the hand normally. East would take the first trump trick with the ace and lead a low heart to West's jack.

Then West would lead a diamond, and East's ruff would defeat the contract.

ONLY COUNTER

The only way to counter this defense was to prevent East from getting the lead to his partner. Since West's entry was in hearts, South had to avoid the loss of a heart trick.

South could afford to lose a trick in some other suit if he could thereby deprive West of his heart trick.

When South looked at the hand in this light he soon saw the best plan.

SECOND TRICK

After winning the second trick with the king of diamonds South started to run the clubs. East ruffed the third round of clubs to prevent South from discarding but South was too clever to over-ruff.

South discarded the eight of hearts.

This gave East an "unnecessary" trick in trumps but prevented him from leading a heart to his partner. East never got his diamond ruff, and South therefore made his contract.

DEATH WHILE SIGHTSEEING

Mrs. Angeline C. Luther of Ironwood, Mich., died in the back seat of this station wagon yesterday afternoon after it was struck head-on by a careening car driven by Dorothy B. Anderson of Bodega Bay. Mrs. Anderson, her passenger and five persons in the Luther car were injured in the wreck. The Luthers were sightseeing in the area. Mrs. Luther, visiting California for the first time, had asked to see the Golden Gate Bridge. (California Highway Patrol photo by Sgt. James C. Dukes)

Great Train Robber Hunt Continuing

LONDON (UPI) — Scotland Yard followed up a half dozen slender clues today in hopes of tracing Ronald A. Biggs, the "great train robber" who escaped from a prison here Thursday with three "armed and dangerous" companions.

Scores of detectives scanned crowds at airports, railway stations and seaports without result.

Police located the garage where a truck used in the prison break was painted to resemble a post office vehicle and where a hole was cut in the top. The man who did the work described a number of persons connected with the job.

In the getaway, the truck pulled up to the walls of South London's Wandsworth Prison at a prearranged time. Biggs and his companions climbed the walls on the inside with the aid of a rope ladder, leaped down into the truck and fled in a waiting car.

The convicts who escaped with Biggs were serving time for offenses involving robbery, but so far as is known none of them had any connection with the $7.3 million train robbery of August, 1963 — the biggest cash theft in history.

They are Eric Flower, convicted of armed robbery; Robert Anderson and Patrick Doyle, both serving time for conspiracy to rob.

Colombian Boy Is 'Adopted'

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Davis of 225 El Prado Avenue, Los Ranchitos, have financially "adopted" a 9-year-old Colombian boy through Foster Parents Plan Inc. of New York.

The boy, Victor Hugo Moreno, lives with his parents, a brother and sister and a cousin in a slum area. His diabetic father makes $50 monthly as a construction worker.

The Davises earlier helped a child in Viet Nam, but transferred their aid to the Colombian child when the Vietnamese boy no longer needed it.

Conservation Name On Board's Agenda

Marin County supervisors Monday will consider changing the name of the county parks and recreation commission to the parks and conservation commission.

The change is recommended in a letter from County Administrator Alan Bruce, who says it ties in with the county-city services report to be heard at 9 p.m. Monday. That report suggests that the county concentrate on acquisition of land while the cities and districts concentrate on recreation programs.

The board meeting will begin at 2 p.m. at the Civic Center. Bruce's letter on the parks and recreation commission is to be heard soon after 3:30 p.m. The board will recess for supper and reconvene at 8 p.m.

The idea of adding conservation to the name and duty of the commission came originally from Supervisor Thomas T. Storer last month.

In his letter, Bruce says the commission should recommend priorities for land to be preserved by various means, including scenic easements on agricultural land, grants of development right, and purchase.

The commission should be responsible for preparing a county-wide bond issue for acquisition of land and water area after success of financing with state and federal aid can be measured, he suggests.

The commission should also pursue the concept of regional parks in cooperation with other areas of the bay area, Bruce says.

"Not enough emphasis has been put to date on the preservation of pasture and other agricultural lands," his letter declares.

Bruce says this is a good time to consider the shift in duties due to three pending appointments to the commission and the need to replace the present director of the department, Kelvin J. Nelson, who has resigned as of Sept. 30.

"A tighter organizational framework and perhaps more effective action would result from elimination of the parks and recreation commission, transfer of its essential functions to the planning commission, and continuation of a parks and conservation staff," says his letter. "This more radical change is not recommended at this time, but may deserve future consideration."

Also on Monday's agenda for discussion in the afternoon is a recommendation from county health officer Carolyn B. Albrecht that all future requests for septic tanks in watershed areas be deferred until the board of supervisors adopts a septic tank policy.

At 8 p.m. the board is to hold a hearing on annexation of land to the Santa Venetia flood control zone. An earlier hearing brought complaints that residents of the area to be annexed, southeast of the present boundary, were not properly notified.

Swim Lessons

The San Rafael Recreation Department will hold swim lesson sign-ups for children Monday, from 9 to 10 a.m., and for adults, Tuesday, from 7 to 8 p.m., at the Terra Linda High School pool.

Poitier Tells Wedding Plans

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Oscar-winner Sidney Poitier and Broadway actress Diahann Carroll plan to wed when the actor's divorce becomes final, probably in October.

A spokesman for the 41-year-old actor, who received the Academy Award for "Lillies of the Field," said Thursday his divorce will become final in six weeks. The spokesman said the couple probably will wed when Miss Carroll, the star of "No Strings" on Broadway, leaves for a tour of Australia in October.

Poiter had three children during his 13 years' marriage to his first wife, Juanita, a former dancer.

PUTTING UP THE CROSS

Workmen put the finishing touches this week on the cross atop the new sanctuary of the Methodist Church of Mill Valley, Camino Alto at Sycamore Avenue. The church's pastor, G. Russell Oaks, has announced that Bishop Donald H. Tippett of the northern California-Nevada district of the Methodist Church will speak at 11 a.m. July 25, for the consecration of the new edifice. What Benefit In Churchgoing?

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

There is a growing tendency among Americans to minimize the importance of church attendance.

In a recent public opinion poll, 67 per cent of the people interviewed agreed with the statement:

"You don't need to go to church to be a good Christian."

One reason why this viewpoint has gained such wide acceptance is that churchgoers rarely try to contradict it. They're afraid of sounding stuffy, or pharisaical, if they voice their conviction that going to church is not an optional extra but a very basic part of Christian living.

Why do they believe this? If you pin down a faithful churchgoer, you'll find that he has several reasons for spending morning in a pew rather than in bed or on the golf course.

The first and best reason for going to church is to worship God. To worship means "to give honor or reverence." An older and more illuminating definition says that worshipping means "ascribing ultimate worth" to the object of worship.

Worshipping God is not just one of man's religious duties. According to the Bible, it is his pre-eminent duty, the chief end of his existence, the thing for which he was created.

It is certainly possible to worship God on a mountaintop as well as in a church. But how many people get up on Sunday morning and repair to mountaintop in order to spend an hour in reverent solitude? A church service is for most people the best opportunity the week affords to "be still and know that I am God."

A second reason for going to church is purely selfish — but selfish only in the sense that it's selfish to eat when you're hungry. The regular churchgoer comes to depend upon this hour on Sunday morning to renew his supply of love, kindness, patience and perspective: In short, to recharge spiritual batteries which have been badly drained by a week's encounter with the world.

Once again, it must be acknowledged that there are other ways to achieve renewal of the human spirit. Some people do it by listening to music, by taking a walk in the woods, by sailing a boat, or by taking the family on an outing. Most churchgoers do these things, too. But it has been their experience that all such forms of "recreation" are more effective when treated as a supplement rather than a substitute for communion with God in church.

A third reason for going to church is to learn. Few sermons are so bad that a listener cannot hear some faint echo of the word of God. And if the sermon should prove to be a total loss, there are still the scripture readings, the prayers and the hymns through which the Holy Spirit can speak to a person who is genuinely seeking light for his pathway.

A fourth reason for attending church is to identify with, to become a real participating member of, the community of faith. "There is no such thing as a solitary Christian," said John Wesley. From New Testament times, the Christian experience has been recognized as something which men must share, which becomes fully real only in the context of a fellowship or community. And the church, notwithstanding its many failures and frailties, is still the "body of Christ," the human community within which Christ promised that his spirit would always dwell.

The intelligent churchgoer will concede that there are some hypocrites in the church and some highly moral people outside it. He will acknowledge that churches waste a lot of time, money and energy on parochial boondoggling that has no relevance to what Christ would expect his body to be doing in a torn and suffering world.

But to say that the institutional church has shortcomings is simply to register a fact which St. Paul noted 2,000 years ago: "We hold this treasure in earthern vessels." The remarkable thing is that the treasure itself has been preserved, and transmitted from generation to generation.

Old Indian Criticizes Ouster Of Clergyman

ISLETA, N.M. (UPI) — The old Indian man stood in the middle of the dusty road passing in front of his crumbled adobe house, clenched his fist and exclaimed, "Even in Russia I know damn well they don't tie up and handcuff a religious man, and it shouldn't have happened here. I am ashamed."

The old man spoke of a strange event — the eviction of a Catholic priest, Rt. Rev. Msgr. Fredrick Stadtmueller, from his parish at Isleta Indian Pueblo.

On Sunday, June 25, moments after he finished saying Mass, Msgr. Stadtmueller was handcuffed and led from historic San Augustine Church by Isleta Pueblo Gov. Andy Abeita.

The act culminated an old feud between a segment of the Pueblo's Indian population and the German-born priest. It marked a new chapter in the long and bloody history of the mission itself, originally established in 1613 by a Franciscan missionary.

The twin - towered church looms above the Pueblo's bleak, flat buildings. Its gleaming white walls contrast sharply with the dingy buildings surrounding it. It is a bit of freshness in a jumbled mass of stale poverty.

Legends dating back to bloody Indian uprisings of the 17th century surround the church—legends which add to the religious superstitions of the Indians, the underlying cause of the strife.

Over nine years, Msgr. Stadtmueller did not hide his objections to some of the Indian religious rites — and their interference with his own religious ceremonies.

Catholicism in the Indian pueblos of the Southwest is tempered with a mixture of ancient Indian ritual. Indian dances are held at many of the 18 pueblos in New Mexico following Mass on Christmas and Easter. After bloody revolts the early Spanish missionaries decided to compromise and allow a strange blend of their own religion and the ancient Indian rituals.

This compromise existed here until the arrival of Msgr. Stadtmueller.

PULPIT GUEST — "Beyond Disenchantment" will be the sermon topic of Lawrence L. Wade at Fairfax Community Church, at 10 a.m. tomorrow. Wade is vice-president for development at Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, which is an interdenominatorial graduate school for the training of ministers, and a former newspaper executive with the San Francisco Chronicle. He has just returned from the National United Church Synod meeting at Chicago, where he was a delegate from Northern California. The Fairfax church's minister, James P. Sherman, is vacationing.

Church Sponsoring 'Integrated Living'

Fifteen youngsters from Marin City are sharing with 15 youngsters in families of the Unitarian-Universalist Church in Marin, the first church-sponsored "experience in integrated living."

Before the two eight-day sessions conclude July 27, a total of 30 more children will have participated in the outings, swimming parties, games, arts and craft activities and many other facets of the program. The program began on Tuesday.

The youngsters gather each weekday morning at the church on Channing Way, high on the hill east of Northgate Shopping Center. There, for a few minutes, they confer about what they want to do the next day, and then scatter in small groups for various activities.

Yesterday, for instance, all went to McClure's Beach for a picnic and games. The day before, most of the youngsters went swimming in a congregation member's pool at his Terra Linda home; others stayed at the church for crafts instruction, and others simply spent the morning and early afternoon reading and playing games at the church.

Nature talks and field trips, drama, sailing, stitchery and many other activities are offered under the guidance of two professional staff members and more than 20 adult volunteers who include a psychologist, teachers, school administrators and housewives as well as teenagers.

Professional staffers are Neill Whitman, principal of Hamilton School in the Novato District, who is volunteering his services, and Irving Wasserman, Novato school district sixth grade teacher.

Youngsters participating in the program are of widely-varied and economic backgrounds. All range from 9 to 13 years old.

Tour Group Due At Episcopalian Church In Ross

Next in the series of "Fellowship of the Faiths" visits to various Marin County churches will be a tour of the St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross at 1 p.m. Tuesday.

Rev. Harold Hallet will guide the visitors on a tour of the church and explain the significance of symbols and sacred objects in the church. A question and answer period will be followed by the serving of refreshments by the women of the church.

The church visits, sponsored by the Marin Young Women's Christian Assn., are open to the public.

The tour series will conclude for the summer with visits July 20 to the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints Greenbrae, and July 27 to the First Baptist Church of San Anselmo.

Choir Visit Slated From Mexican City

"The Orfeons," 17 young a capella singers from Torreon, Mexico, will be day-long visitors at the First Methodist Church of San Rafael tomorrow.

The group will participate in the morning worship services, accompanied by the minister of their own Methodist church in Torreon, and in the afternoon will be guest of the San Rafael church's Sunday school at an all-church picnic.

The young musician will perform Mexican sacred and folk music, as well as Negro spirituals sung in Spanish. In the afternoon, they will demonstrate typical Mexican folk dancing.

The Orfeons' visit to Marin County is sponsored by a group of young people of the Methodist Church of Mill Valley, who became acquainted with the Mexican youngsters while on a chapel repair project in Torreon last summer.

An Encouraging Sign For Ken Venturi

HILLSBOROUGH (AP) — Former U.S. Open golf champion Ken Venturi, who underwent surgery on his ailing hands June 24, said today "I feel the finger circulation coming back, but gradually."

"The bandages are off but I'm under strict orders not to swing a golf club of any kind until I'm completely ready," he added.

Surgeons at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., operated to relieve pressure in what is known medically as a carpal tunnel syndrome.

In the fall of 1964 after he had won the national title Venturi suffered a circulatory ailment in his hands and could not grip the club properly. In cool weather his hands would turn white.

He underwent treatment but determined to try to defend his championship last month at St. Louis. He didn't qualify for the final 36 holes and returned to Rochester.

Although doctors had tentatively diagnosed the trouble, Venturi said "I tried to play a cut shot on the fourth hole during the Open and my hand went white. It was a clue to my true trouble. When I told the doctors at Mayo Clinc about it, they decided I had the carpal tunnel syndrome. It was decided an operation should be performed immediately."

Venturi described the carpal tunnel syndrome as tendons in the hands and wrists pinching off nerves.

To alleviate this, incisions of about three inches were made starting at the base of the palms, cutting tendons around the median nerves.

"It should stop my hands from going into spasms," the golfer explained.

Asked if the diagnosis ruled out the earlier one of Raynaud's phenomenon, Venturi replied, "Not necessarily. Raynaud's is a very peculiar thing. It is an end result."

He said that he now feels warmth in his right hand and this is encouraging to his future in golf.

"They tell me that I'll be able to take a full swing without flinching," he said. "But they also told me not to go out on the tee until I am 100 per cent ready. They told me it might take as long as six months before I'm back to my old, healthy self."

MARIN YACHTS LEAD IN TRANS-PAC RACE

Two Marin County boats were more than holding their own today in the 2,225-mile Los Angeles to Honolulu Trans-Pacific Yacht Race.

K. W. Demuse's 83-foot schooner Serena, the fleet's scratch boat representing the San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere, passed the halfway point yesterday, leading the 55-craft field on elapsed time, but was fourth on a handicap basis. Her position was given as 1,136 miles from the finish.

Skipper Wally Nichell's Santana, a 55-foot cutter representing Corinthian Y.C. at Tiburon, was leading Class B on a handicap basis, according to Associated Press.

Mays Rests, Giants Flop; Marichal Hurls Tonight

Phils Romp TO 10-2 Victory

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Willie Mays needs his rest, but the San Francisco Giants need Willie Mays.

Seven times the All Star center fielder has rested this season under the new managerial regime of Herman Franks. And the Giants have lost six of those times, including last night when the Philadelphia Phils humbled them 10-2.

The only time the Giants have won without the 34-year-old Mays in the starting lineup came on May 30 at Candlestick Park. And it was his pinch-hit, wind-tortured fly in the 10th inning with the bases loaded that Bob Skinner dropped for an error allowing the Giants to beat St. Louis 3-2.

JUAN VS. PHILS
The Giants send ace Juan Marichal (13-7) against the Phillies' Ray Culp (5-5) tonight at 5 o'clock.

In recent seasons, Mays has fainted at the plate and in the dugout while trying to play the entire schedule. At this season's rate, Mays will start 150 of 162 games, not a bad pace for a senior citizen center fielder.

So there Mays was last night, watching helplessly from the bench as Jack Sanford took his second loss in as many nights.

Sanford was doing better than Thursday when he was pounded off the mound in one-third inning. But with the game Friday scoreless in the fourth, he gave up a lead-off single to Johnny Briggs and then hit Cookie Rojas as he was squaring off to bunt.

Callison hit Murakami's first pitch over the right field wall for his 17th homer.

These were all the runs needed by Jim Bunning, who had a no-hitter going until Tom Haller hit a bases-empty homer in the seventh.

The Phils' right-hander finished with a five-hitter that improved his record to 10-5. Ninth-inning singles by Jim Hart, Haller, Len Gabrielson and Bob Schroder brought in another Giants' run.

Murakami mowed down the next 10 Philadelphia batters after Callison's blast. He hit Tony Gonzalez with a pitch after one down in the seventh and then surrendered a double to Dick Stuart.

Franks then brought in Ron Herbel, who got Bobby Wine to ground out as Gonzalez scored. Before Herbel could get the third out, five more runs crossed the plate.

Bunning singled in another run and Briggs singled infield loading the bases. Rojas unloaded them with a double followed by Callison's triple.

SEMI-PROS

Bitter Baseball Battle Tomorrow

Bitter intra-county rivalry between the Billings-Hutchison Builders of San Rafael and Mill Valley Merchants will come to the front tomorrow in a feature game of the Bay Area Invitational Semi-Pro Baseball League.

The two Marin teams will square off at 1:30 p.m. on the Optimists' Field in Mill Valley. This game should draw a mighty fine crowd.

Billings-Hutchison is currently on top of league standings with a 3-0 record and Mill Valley is tied for third at 1-1. The Merchants will be trying to avenge a pre-league practice game loss to the Builders, 9-4.

Either Ernie Evans or Bob DeRosa will pitch for the Builders. Evans, a southpaw, has received credit for all three Builder league victories. Going for Mill Valley will be right-hander Frank Burch who has a 1-1 record.

Starting lineup for the visiting Builders:

BRITISH OPEN POST MORTEM

Nicklaus: I Shall Return

By HENRY W. THORNBERRY

SOUTHPORT, England (UPI) —Burly Jack Nicklaus vowed to return for another attempt at the elusive British Open title today and champion Peter Thomson was anxious to visit the United States for a crack at the $50,000 World Series of Golf jackpot.

"I'm determined to win the British Open at all costs," Nicklaus said after his disastrous 294 gave him a share of 12th place behind Thomson, who captured his fifth open with a 285. The Ohioan has won every major title with the exception of this elusive Open.

Tony Lema, the 1964 titlist, Arnold Palmer, a two-time winner, and Terry Dill all expressed a desire to play in next year's Open at Muirfield, Scotland. Lema shot a 289 for a fifth place tie with Kel Nagle of Australia, and Palmer had a 295 that included a final round 79. Dill carded a 305 to finish way down in the pack.

Thomson gained entrance to the World Series of Golf at Akron, Ohio, in September by winning the British Open. The enticing 50 grand overshadows the $4,900 the Australian won yesterday.

The Aussie par-buster was burdened with a case of chronic hay fever until 10 days ago. He miraculously recovered from the ailment in time to win the Open and become the third man to win this title five times. James G. Braid and John Henry Taylor both accomplished the task near the turn of the century. Harry Vardon, however, owns the record of six Open triumphs.

Thomson's four day card read 74-68-72-71—285, two strokes better than Ireland's Christie O'Connor and Welshman Brian Hugget at the finish. The Aussie plans to compete in the French Open next week and then go home for a month. He returns for the British PGA prior to the high-paying World Series of Golf tourney.

Thomson narrowly missed having another Aussie for immediate company in the Ohio tourney. Nagle lost to Gary Player of South Africa in the recent U. S. Open. Nicklaus previously qualified by winning the American Masters title.

'Foreign Domination Of Golf Just A Trend; U.S. Will Rise Again—Jones

ATLANTA (AP) — Bob Jones won't take anything away from foreign golf stars Peter Thompson and Gary Player but the former king of the links and one of the game's all-time greats says Americans will rise again, quickly.

"I just don't think this foreign domination is a trend," Jones said as he talked about Thomson's victory yesterday in the British Open and Player's recent triumph in the U.S. Open.

Thomson is from Australia and Player from South Africa.

"It's just one of those things that happens in the uncertain game of golf," Jones said. "Foreigners won't beat our top players with any great amount of consistency."

Jones, who scored the grand-slam of golf by winning both the British and U.S. Opens and the British and U.S. Amateurs in 1930, said he was mystified by the recent play of Masters champion Jack Nicklaus and strong-man Arnold Palmer.

"I can't understand what has happened to Nicklaus," Jones said. "I suppose he's just in a slump and will snap back. Obviously, the same thing is true in Palmer's case."

Nicklaus, who won the Masters in April with a record score, finished 12th in the British Open, while the struggling Palmer soared to a 79 in the final round and finished 13th.

"It should be pointed out that weather conditions often are quite treacherous on British courses," Jones said. "Our players are accustomed to playing golf in fairly good weather.

"You simply can't expect the same regularity of performance in bad weather conditions.

"I never played in Australia, but I understand it's extremely windy on the courses there, very similar to the type of weather you run into in England."

Jones admits there "are more good foreign players now than there have been in a number of years," but noted he really doesn't consider Player a foreigner to United States courses.

"Player has been on the American tour so long that he knows our golf courses as well as any American. The same is true of some other foreign players — men like Bruce Devlin and Bobby Locke, until he was injured in an accident."

Jones also questioned Player's statement after he won the Open that America's emphasis on power golf hurt such power players as Nicklaus and Palmer on some courses. By contrast, Player said, foreign golfers concentrate on just hitting the ball straight.

"That might have had something to do with Player's win in the Open," Jones said. "But I doubt it. I watched the Open on television and thought the biggest factor in Player's win was his ability to get down in two from off the green. His chipping and putting was exceptionally good.

"I don't think you'll see Nicklaus and Palmer de-emphasize power," Jones concluded in an interview with the Atlanta Constitution.

Hurtubise Sets Mark

ATLANTA (AP) — Another speed record has been set at Atlanta International Raceway.

Jim Hurtubise set a world record for a 1½-mile closed track yesterday when he drove a high-powered Novi 164.500 miles per hour.

Last week Lloyd Ruby drove a rear-engine Ford on a fast lap of 163.400 m.p.h., setting a record that lasted until Hurtubise's run.

Both drivers are taking part in tire tests in preparation for the Championship 250, a race for Indianapolis-type cars which will be run at the Raceway Aug 1.

A. J. Foyt, who also will drive in the race, said it will take a speed of at leat 170 m.p.h. to win the pole position.

Maloney Pitches Redlegs Back On Top; L. A. Beaten

By CURT BLOCK
UPI Sports Writer

Jim Maloney set three goals for himself this spring and he's well on the way to fulfilling them.

First, he wanted to make the All-Star team. He's already accomplished that and don't be surprised if he's the starting pitcher.

Second, he wanted to win 20 games. He reached the half way mark last night when he hiked his record to 10-4 with a 6-2 win over Milwaukee.

And finally, he wanted to play in the World Series. That pitch the Reds back into first place yesterday as the Los Angeles Dodgers slipped to second when Pittsburgh's Bob Veale conquered them, 4-1.

In other National League contests, Philadelphia walloped San Francisco 10-2; Houston bested New York 6-2; and St. Louis beat Chicago 7-4.

Cincinnati pilot Dick Sisler has virtually given Maloney a clear road to an All-Star starting assignment.

"I told him not to pick up a ball until Tuesday," Sisler said. "He'll have three days rest."

And don't think the crew-cut Californian doesn't appreciate it. The All-Star game is more than just an exhibition to him.

Back in 1963 when he won 23 games and was 11-2 at the mid-season break he was informed he had made the squad and began posing for pictures. Soon afterwards he was told that the report was erroneous and he had been bypassed. It was a slight he hasn't forgotten.

While going the route for the eighth time this season Maloney clubbed two of the Reds' 12 hits and drove in a run.

Vada Pinson carried the big bat with a triple and single good for three runs-batted-in.

Veale upped his record to 9-6 with a five-hit performance in which Roberto Clemente extended his hitting streak to 19 games with a fifth inning two-run homer off loser Nick Willhite. The Bucs closed out their scoring with two in the seventh on a single, a triple by Donn Clendenon and Bill Mazeroski's sacrifice fly.

A three-run homer by Tito Francona highlighted a four-run rally as the St. Louis Cardinals beat Chicago behind Tracy Stallard. The homer came at the expense of reliever Lindy McDaniel and followed base hits by Curt Flood and Dick Groat which were dealt up by loser Bob Buhl. Ron Santo clouted his 17th homer in the seventh for the Cubs first run.

Larry Dierker, an 18-year-old righthander, stopped the Mets on seven hits to gain his third victory in seven decisions. Dierker was staked to an early 6-0 lead as his teammates assaulted loser Jack Fisher and reliever Gordon Richardson in the first two innings. Joe Morgan, the Astros slugging second sacker, drove in three runs with a second inning triple and Rusty Staub knocked in two more for Houston.

MAN AND MACHINE—Leroy Geving of Novato stands by the hardtop he's been racing this season at the Vallejo Speedway. Currently in fifth place in point standings, Geving is defending champion driver at Vallejo, winning the titles in 1963 and '64.

A SHINING EXAMPLE OF BASEBALL HONESTY

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball has long passed the stage where it needs proof of its honesty.

But it is always a heart-warming thing to watch a big league manager go all out to win even on a rare occasion when a defeat might prove to be more profitable.

This may have been the case last night when Manager Luman Harris pulled out all the stops in directing his Houston Astros to a 6-2 victory over the New York Mets. It was Houston's seventh victory in eight meetings with the Mets this season.

Harris arrived at Shea Stadium with the knowledge that the Chicago Cubs had lost their afternoon game. That meant that a Houston victory would lift the Astros past the Cubs into eighth place. A Houston defeat would keep the club in ninth place for the time being.

This had a special meaning for Harris.

Both the Cubs and Astros had laid claim to Frank Thomas of Philadelphia, on whom manager Gene Mauch had asked waivers. The claiming deadline was set for Saturday noon. Under the rules, the team lowest in the standings receives priority.

Harris was, of course, well aware of it.

"This is one time," he mused, "when a defeat might turn out to be more profitable for us. If we lose, we get first shot at Thomas. If we win, the Cubs probably get him, unless they have changed their minds about him."

Harris looked out on the field from his vantage point in a corner of the dugout and said:

"You know something? We're going to try like the devil to win this one. Sure we want Thomas. He can help us. We're a left-handed hitting club and he represents a strong right-handed punch.

"But we want to win more. After all, that's the idea of this game. Win, win, win, nothing else matters."

The Astros wasted no time putting their manager's thoughts into action. They pounced on Met right-hander Jack Fisher in the first inning and at the end of the second, they had opened up a 6-0 advantage.

Seals To Train In Canada

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The Seals said yesterday their training camp will open in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, on Sept. 21.

Coach Bud Poile said the Western Hockey League will train in Edmonton until Oct. 10 and return to San Francisco's Cow Palace on Oct. 13 for final drills in preparation for their league opener against Los Angeles on Oct. 15.

A year ago the Seals remained home and conducted all their training at the Cow Palace, but Poile believes this resulted in a feeling of complacency.

About 20 professionals and 10 amateurs will attend the training camp. Recently acquired Jack McCartan, former Olympic star, heads the goal tender list with amateurs Henry Coy and Douglas Favell being given tryouts.

Poile said the status of several players is in doubt since their contracts are owned by the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League. In this list are Nick Mickoski, Del Topoll, Gary Dornhoefer and Dallas Smith.

Snell Won't Retire Yet

PRAGUE (AP) — Peter Snell, the fading middle distance master from New Zealand, wasted no time in scotching reports he would retire following his ninth straight defeat.

"I will continue to run and I am not going to quit before I reach my top form again," Snell said yesterday after finishing third in the 1,500 meters in the International Rosicky Memorial track and field meet.

"The Prague run gave me new confidence," he said. "What I need now is some good training. I am not going to leave the track."

Snell, the 800 and 1,500 meter gold medal winner in the Tokyo Olympics, had announced that the current tour was his farewell jaunt. Earlier this week he had said he would retire immediately if he lost in Prague.

He finished in 3:42.6 roughly equal to a 3:59.6 mile, and was about five yards back of the winner, Huergen May of East Germany. May was timed in 3:42.1.

Two Polish girls, Eva Klobukowska and Irena Kirszenstein, were timed in 11.1 in the 100 meter dash, breaking the world record of 11.2 shared by two Tennessee State girls, Wilma Rudolph and Wyomia Tyus.

Novatan Leroy Geving Owns String Of Records In 17 Years Of Racing

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Leroy Geving of Novato, race car driver for 17 years who has a string of records behind him in the hardtop circuit, is itching to try his hand at midget auto racing.

Geving, 34, has been one of the top drivers in the hardtop racing program at Vallejo Speedway for the past four years, winning the championship crown the past two years. He was second in point standings in 1961 and fourth in 1962. Trying to repeat his championship this year has been hard for the veteran driver.

"I've finished only five times in 14 races this year," said Geving. Mechanical troubles, blown tires, crashes and flips have been going against him and he's now in fifth place in point standings at Vallejo.

In 1960 Geving won championships at Santa Rosa and Pacheco tracks and set track records at both. The two ovals have since been torn down.

He held the lap record of 14.79 seconds on the Vallejo quarter-mile oval last year, but it was later broken by Chet Thompson of Hayward who toured the distance in 14.66 seconds. He's now driving Car No. 6, owned by Joe Bonifacio of Napa, and won the Fourth of July special 100-lapper at the Vallejo track. In this car he set the track mile record at Vallejo, going the four laps in just under one minute.

Geving tried midget auto racing once, and drove in two races of a program, taking home third and fourth places. Now he wants to go back for more. He is planning to drive a car owned by Chuck Feguerreo, owner of Chuck's Union Station in Fairfax, next Friday in a midget auto racing card at Vallejo Speedway. If all goes well, he'll be doing more midget racing in that car number 86.

Although hitting speeds of 85 and 90 miles per hour on the straightaways, there are not many injuries in crash-filled hardtop racing, mostly because of the top above drivers' heads and roll bars to prevent the top from flattening on flips. Midget autos have a solitary roll bar, without a top, so it's obvious drivers go with more care than with hardtops.

In his 17 years of racing, which includes two years of driving sprint cars, Geving recalls only once being seriously injured. That was back in 1961 in Sacramento.

"I hit the wall going about 85," said Geving. "I got 13 stitches in an ear, I couldn't turn my head for three months and I was limping on a bad ankle." But that didn't slow him down in later years, as evidenced by his championship performances in 1963 and '64.

The Minnesota-born Geving doesn't plan to take the next step from midget auto racing—big cars. But he has talked to friends about driving big cars in the past, so it's not completely out of his mind.

Geving is night manager at the Old Adobe restaurant and bar at the Petaluma Inn, the restaurant and bar portion of the inn owned by his half-brother, Milton Lund.

Family home for the Gevings is at 1311 Leafwood Drive in Novato. He and his wife, Bonnie, have a daughter, Cindy, 8, and a son, Gary, 14 weeks old.

The Gevings have lived in Novato for about a year, moving from Petaluma. They have been California residents for the past 20 years.

Raiders Boast Finest Crop Of Rookies For '65 Season

SANTA ROSA (AP) — Oakland's Raiders of the American Football League open training next Wednesday with 42 players including a rookie crop the club calls its best, ever.

An additional group of 22—all veterans of last year's club—will report to the Santa Rosa training camp on Sunday, July 18.

Three additional rookies — guard Harry Schuh, end Fred Biletnikoff and defensive back Larry Todd—will report to the Raiders after the College All-Star game on August 6 in Chicago.

Coach Al Davis says veterans will provide the hard core of his 1965 squad, his third since taking over as coach and general manager of the club.

Overall, the roster lists 23 rookies and 44 veterans. Seven vets are reporting after service with other clubs and one, fullback Al Miller, is coming back after sitting out the 1964 year to finish his law education.

The seven joining from other teams are fullback Roger Hagberg, defensive halfback Dave Grayson, linebacker Gorden Kelly, defensive tackle Pat Russ, defensive end Isaac Lassiter, quarterback Dick Wood and flanker Dobie Craig.

In addition to Schuh, Biletnikoff and Todd, the rookie crop includes such star collegians as defensive back Kent McCloughan of Nebraska, fullback Gus Otto of Missouri, defensive lineman rich Zecher of Utah State, Mickey Cox of Louisiana State and Bill Minor of Illinois; and offensive linemen Bob Svihus of Southern California and Dick Hermann of Florida State.

The Raiders posted a 5-7-2 record in 1964 after surprising with a 10-4 record the previous year. Among the 1964 vets, only defensive back Louis Guy won't return. He decided to give up football to pursue his dentistry studies.

The team will maintain headquarters at Santa Rosa through Sept. 10, two days before the opening league game against the Kansas City Chiefs at Oakland's Frank Youell Field.

Top Softball Teams Clash

Sohner Tree Service softballers, currently boasting a 20-6 record, host the powerful Hamilton Field Defenders in a 5:30 p.m. doubleheader tomorrow at San Anselmo's Memorial Park.

Since both the Treemen and the Defenders are entered in next week's District Finals of the California State Softball Tournament in Santa Rosa, the games will serve as an important tune-up for the two teams.

Sohner and Hamilton also will be competing against each other in the sixth annual San Anselmo Invitational Softball Tournament to be staged during the first two weeks of August.

Manager Ron Jerome has nominated Lou Perazzo and either Gary or Morey Swarm to do the hurling for Sohner tomorrow.

TELEVISION REVIEW

Here Are Shows To Watch For

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —Notes to watch television by:

Current Business: John Kerr, who directs Ruth Warrick in a Hollywood theater production of "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?", joins her now in ABC-TV's "Peyton Place" series in a recurring role ... Same network's daytime show, "The Price Is Right," is not expected to be around much longer — with a fall axing probable ... The British government is banning cigarette commercials on television, but the Irish government won't ... the man who directs the ethics department of the ethical culture schools is a guest on NBC-TV's "Today" program Monday ... On Wednesday, "Today" offers a film report about Londoners who play baseball in Hyde Park.

Add Current Busines: Four well - remembered character comedians who were regulars in the "Allen's Alley" segments of the old Fred Allen radio show — are scheduled to appear on "ABC's Nightlife" Tuesday ... Benny Goodman and his daughter Rachel — who plays piano, performed in a recent concert with her father and hopes to be his biographer — visit the same program Monday ... NBC-TV says the "Today" show will present on Thursday "a film report on New York's new and fashionable discotheque, Arthur" as well as an interview with "its famous owner, the former Sybil Burton" ... Fashionable to whom? ... Famous to Whom? ... for NBC to gush in such manner is unseemly indeed, especially for an organization with a Rockefeller Plaza address.

Second Add Current Business: ABC-TV is reported thinking of adding to its classy schedule of soap operas and rock 'n' roll, either next season or the one after, yet another rock 'n' roll series, with the tentative title "From Liverpool to Tennessee" ... One of ABC - TV's new rock 'n' roll series, Dick Clark's "Where The Action Is," may well be slipped back into the daily late - afternoon schedule that once included his awful "American Bandstand" show — of which his latest program is simply an updated, on-location version ... NBC-TV, which has also sacrificed some of its pride to cash in on the soap opera and rock 'n' roll trend, is reported thinking of yet another daytime soaper, this one about a girl veterinarian, no less.

ENTERTAINMENT

Straw Hat Revue Means Laughter

By KARL BARRON

My sides hurt, my nose is running, my mascara's running (whoa!). The Straw Hat Revue's in town! Better call the Festival Theater in San Anselmo and make sure seats are available.

"Here We Are Again, Again," with 10 principals, another 10 or so who aid in one way or another, musical director Larry Snyder playing piano when he isn't taking part, before settings by Tom Borden, and the whole thing directed by Betty Fuller and Elizabeth Berryhill. Add them all together and they spell LAUGHTER.

As usual, the mad straw hatters throw in a few digs at humanity's foibles. "Four portraits of Predatory Beasts", written by Edwin Brush and Robert Monell, is sung by Carol Brumm, Betty Tooker and Carolyn Wiswell, while lovely Susanne Holcombe and Mikel Taxer dance it. Guess who the fourth predator is?

Although this show is a tremendous group effort, and no one person can be pointed out as lacking anything, Marjorie Casebier begins to stand out as the company's comedy star.

In "Davis Cup," a pantomime conceived by Edwin Duerr, Miss Casebier turns in a Chaplinesque performance that keeps one laughing throughout the skit.

Snyder's "Mad Rigals for Moderns" is another group effort which takes some barbed jabs at today's mores, completed with a socko tag line.

As American Humans in several varieties of fun, Miss Casebier and Conrad Knudsen are screamingly funny, even as you realize it's "you" they're portraying. Cynthia Beeman and Glenn Conner add to the family fun.

Dale Moffitt, an intense dramatic actor, comes to this show from the grueling role of Lucky in "Waiting For Godot," preceded by Sir Thomas More in "A Man For All Seasons." Hardly meat for a blackout type revue, you say? The directors have used his great dramatic talent to the Fullerist (pardon) and the effect is hysterical.

Much of the material is repeated from past seasons, for this is billed as a "review of revues." It all can bear repeating, such as "Great Moments of Shakespeare in the Round." As Romeo, Ophelia, Hamlet's dead father, and the melancholy Dane himself mix it up in a stage six feet in diameter, anything can and does happen.

Betty Tooker, a returnee to the company, contributes among many delightful bits, a torch song called "Garbage" - A sample: "... though you called me garbage, I was calm, cool, and collected!" Cool!

Casebier riding a flower-bedecked scooter about the stage, Brumm giving lessons in etiquette, Taxer Ginsberging "Love Song Of A Cough Drop", Moffitt, Taxer and Judy Dennis in a 1918 movie ... I could go on and on. The show does, and when it's over, you wish it weren't.

"Cornellsapoppin" - but there I go again - you'll have to see it.

Criticism? I felt that musical bridges might have helped the scene changes. Not that they were unduly long, but I felt a slight letdown. Perhaps the idea's corny, but there it is.

I sort of missed the little sentimental touches of past years. You know, a love song that was played straight. I know that it's possible to find a past critique in which I panned the love song, but that's the way I felt last night. When I wasn't weeping, blowing my nose, holding my sides and plain screaming, that is.

"Here We Go Again, Again" plays Wednesday through Saturday nights at 8:30. Smorgasbord dinners (delicious) are served Thursday and Friday. Call well ahead.

Contracts Let At Hamilton

A $19,581 contract for refrigerated display cases was awarded to Weber Showcase and Fixture Inc. of Los Angeles yesterday by the base procurement officer at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Other contracts for Hamilton were: A $3,048 contract to Murray Baxter of San Rafael to clean grease traps, and $11,685 contract to W. K. McLellan Co. of San Francisco to pave the hanger floor in building T-95.

For the Mill Valley Air Force Station, a $5,688 contract was awarded to J. A. Fagundes of San Anselmo for garbage collection, a $2,542 contract to La Fargue French Laundry and Linen Service of San Rafael for laundry service, and a $18,290 contract to Jay Alley and Co. of Salina, Kan., for bus transportation.

Five Indicted In Attack Case

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Five young men indicted by the county grand jury for the gang rape of a policeman's daughter today were held in county jail in lieu of $11,000 bail each.

The indictments were returned yesterday after the jury questioned 19-year-old Shirley Diane O'Neil for 35 minutes about the event, which subsequently drove her father to shoot and wound another then-suspect in a police station.

The father, Lt. Thomas O'Neal, 41, has been suspended from the force and charged with assault to commit murder against Carl Norman, 21. Norman, later ruled out as a suspect, was shot July 2 as he was being led in handcuffs down a corridor in the West Valley police station.

Undeclared Truce Reigns In Bank Fuss

An undeclared truce reigns between the two warring factions among trustees of San Rafael's Redwood Bank, but the efforts of one group to buy the other out have proven futile, bank president Byron W. Leydecker declared yesterday.

Leydecker predicted there will be no further fireworks before a July 20 hearing in the First District Court of Appeals on a temporary injunction order of Marin Superior Court preventing a stockholders election to reduce the number of directors from 11 to seven.

While Leydecker said he "can't see them withdrawing" the appeal at this time, he foresaw that the five angry trustees probably would not pursue the matter beyond the hearing.

In May, Leydecker said the "only logical solution" to the split between the two factions was for his group to purchase the stock of the trustees who had resigned as directors in December at the request of Comptroller of the Currency James Saxon.

The resignations came on the heels of a U.S. Senate investigation into the presence of former Senate aide Robert G. (Bobby) Baker's signature on a check paid to a Washington lawyer-lobbyist when the bank received its charter.

Ousted directors later challenged the election and threatened to merge the bank with another.

Yesterday, Leydecker said his efforts to buy out the stock of the ousted directors had gotten nowhere, but concluded, "I don't think they are going to fight anymore."

Rome Coalition Is Dealt Blow

ROME (AP) — Premier Aldo Moro's shaky center-left coalition was dealt a new blow yesterday when Parliament decided to take up a charge of abuse of office against a former Cabinet minister.

Parliament will determine in joint session whether the charge against Sen. Giuseppe Trabucchi, a Christian Democrat, should be dropped or sent to a constitutional court.

The Socialist coalition partners of Moro's Christian Democrats joined nongovernment parties, including the Communist and Fascists, submitting 479 signatures of members asking Parliament to deal with the case. The required total was 477.

Governor Signs Consumer Bills

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown has signed a series of bills designed to strengthen and extend consumer protection in California.

Brown, at the same time, criticized the Legislature for deleting "a significant portion" of support funds from the Office of Consumer Counsel, headed by Mrs. Helen Nelson of Mill Valley.

The measures signed into law covered installment contracts, false and misleading advertising, health care service and dangerous drugs prescriptions.

Clothing Burglar Suspect Is Jailed

Lindell W. Griffin, 21, of 122 Myrtle Street, San Rafael, was jailed Thursday afternoon by Inspector Thomas Cheetham of San Rafael police on suspicion of burglary.

Griffin is suspected of robbing the home of Ronald George McAllister of 120 Miramar Avenue of $300 worth of clothing on July 7, Cheetham said. Bail was set at $2,700.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Abdominal Gas May Come From Digestion, Or Swallowing Air

VAN DELLEN

Many individuals blame abdominal distress on gas, not realizing that something else may be causing their discomfort. It is surprising how often physicians see large amounts of gas in an X-ray of the bowel among persons who have no complaints along this line. In contrast, a small collection of air may be painful when the intestine is irritable. In these instances, relaxing the spastic bowel will bring more relief than treating the flatulence.

IT IS NORMAL to have some gas because most foods ferment during the digestive process. Cabbage, brussels sprouts, cauliflower, turnips, and baked beans are notorious along this line. Constipation encourages gas formation because it permits the intestinal contents to ferment over a longer period.

Flatulence also is a symptom of many gastrointestinal disorders. Swallowing air when eating is common, but many nervous individuals consume excessive amounts, not only with each mouthful but prior to belching.

There are many remedies and the majority are difficult to evaluate. The silicone defoamer (methyl polysiloxane) breaks up the smaller bubbles, enabling them to form larger bubbles which are more easily passed. The chemical is not absorbed and is not toxic. Many absorbents, such as charcoal, kaolin, and chalk, are available. These are more effective when diarrhea is present. The bowel also is capable of absorbing gas and halitosis is traced occasionally to this source.

ENZYMES have been used for many years on the premise that they improve digestion and create less gas. Lactose, amylase, and others are used for this purpose, but again, results are difficult to evaluate. Warm compresses to the abdomen or a little brandy are likely to be just as effective.

Gas pains are common after some operations. This is minimized by keeping the stomach and intestines empty via a suction apparatus. Cholinergic drugs also are used to stimulate the bowel.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics by mail if stamped self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

SPASM AND INDIGESTION

Mrs. C.P. writes: I am 64. I belch, have indigestion and pressure in my left side. The doctor said this is an acid condition and gas pockets. Another said it was a spasm. Who is right?

REPLY

Both could be correct because spasm often goes along with indigestion. The problem could be solved by undergoing a complete physical examination, including X-rays and an electrocardiogram.

LEG EXERCISES

F.J. writes: Two years ago I was treated for varicose veins by the needle method. Now I am considering leg exercises and wonder if these would have a harmful effect on the veins?

REPLY

No.

LOW PURINE DIET

J.H. writes: Which foods are best in gout?

REPLY

A low purine diet is most helpful. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on this subject.

FEET FIRST

A.E. writes: Is a child born feet first likely to be mentally deficient?

REPLY

No, nor does it cause flat feet, as the old story insisted.

FIRST GET PREGNANT

F.K. writes: Can a woman past 60 give birth?

REPLY

Yes, but first she must get pregnant.

Today's Health Hint—Breast lumps should be investigated.

Oak Crest Road Area On Agenda

The Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission will re-hear testimony on the proposed annexation of the 23-acre Oak Crest Road area to the Sleepy Hollow Fire District at 8:15 a.m. Monday in room 413 of the civic center.

After a long debate June 24, the commission voted 2-1 in favor of the annexation, with commissioners Hugh Marchant and Byron W. Leydecker absent. This vote did not give the required majority for approval so the matter was rescheduled.

The City of San Anselmo, represented at the first hearing by City Administrator Douglas Flautt, wants the area annexed to the city, which provides fire protection in Sleepy Hollow Fire District by contract.

Wedding Plans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. and Mrs. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut announced Saturday the engagement of their daughter, Jane, to Warren Bishop of the Wall Street firm of Bishop and Son Inc. A small family-affair wedding will take place at Hartford, Conn., Aug. 16.

Alchemist's Land Of Earth, Air, Water

Water-girt, wind-freshened, Marin County's vigorous hills and hollows offer living more like an island than anywhere else in California.

The intimate mixture of wave, wind and earth are dramatically illustrated in this photo of the county's heartland.

Sweeping down the eastern side of Richardson Bay at the right are the homes along Tiburon Boulevard—Strawberry Manor, Reed, Little Reed Heights, Bel Aire, Tiburon itself.

At far right center are Corte Madera, Larkspur and glimpses of Kentfield, Ross San Anselmo and Fairfax among the hills.

HOW MUCH SHOULD ONE PAY FOR COMPONENTS? SHOULD ONE EXPECT A DISCOUNT? During the past several years, the buying habits of this nation have been undergoing a change. The large influencing factor in this change is the entry of the DISCOUNT HOUSE. People have become accustomed to a "marked down" price. Naturally, the psychological effect of discounted pricing on the prospective buyer is being exploited to its fullest. Many a buyer has been deceived into believing that he or she has saved a great deal of money, but further investigation would show that they could have purchased the same product at the same price in a non-discount store that specialized in the product; that employed highly qualified personnel to demonstrate the product and train the buyer in its operation; and most important, that had as an integral part of its store a complete and experienced service department.

A discount store can operate at lower prices by cutting down on its overhead. This means by hiring clerks to ring up the sales instead of hiring trained sales experts. This means cutting out all warranty service, leaving you on your own if the product does not perform satisfactorily after you open the factory sealed carton. This means using any form of advertising that will make you believe that you are making a large saving. I recently visited a large chain discount store on the peninsula to see what their prices were on the products that we sold in common. Believe me, I was amazed. I saw on display a Sony tape recorder that was marked with a large price tag showing regular price as $495, but "xx's low, low price only $295." The amazing part is that every highly specialized High Fi Stereo store like my own had been selling that same Sony tape recorder for $295 for more than a year; however, most Hi-Fi stores fully tested each unit before selling it, and most stores gave the buyer full warranty service. A further check showed that the prices on most of the components that I sold were exactly the same as the prices of this discount store.

Why are prices deceiving? Many manufacturers realize that the discount houses have caused the customers to expect a discount so they have a fictitious LIST PRICE and a fair traded minimum selling price. Most of us sell at the fair traded minimum price, however, the quality store also includes expert guidance and warranty service for the same price. Shop around before you buy.

DECORATIVE EMBROIDERY work by Mrs. Eric Hicks of Mill Valley provides just the right touch of authenticity to the sleeve of this Hungarian shirt which her husband will wear tomorrow when the Hickses take part in the annual Marin Dance Council Inc. sponsored festival at the College of Marin in Kentfield. Fancy stitchery is as much a part of folk dancing as fancy footwork, as observers will detect from the colorful costumes to be seen tomorrow.

Nimble Feet And Fingers

You Must Have Both To Be A Folk Dancer

By DON KEOWN

Nimble feet alone are not enough for folk dancing.

You must have nimble fingers as well.

At least, that attribute is a virtual requisite for women who take up the hobby.

The reason: Costumes.

MOST FOLK dancers regard authentic costumes as a virtual "must" if they are to pursue the activity. And usually, that means it is up to the woman of the family to take up the needle, thread and thimble.

Nor does simple sewing suffice. To provide the frills and adornments necessary for the colorful attire, embroidery is essential.

Marin Dance Council Inc. officers estimate that 50 per cent of Marin's women who folk dance also embroider.

THE RESULTS of their artwork—and it is an art, insists Mrs. Alfred Everson of Terra Linda, one of their number—will be very much in evidence tomorrow when the Marin Dance Council conducts its annual festival with an afternoon session starting at 1:30 on the lawn of the College of Marin Quad in Kentfield, followed by an evening dancefest in the new college gymnasium beginning at 7:30.

The colorful event, free to dancers and spectators alike, attracts enthusiasts from throughout Northern California.

The competition in costume finery is as keen as it is in the footwork department.

MOST FOLK dancers are convinced that it is the embroidery work that makes the difference between a costume of eye-catching appeal and just another piece of ethnic attire.

It is she who instructs the adult evening class at the College of Marin, with many of the women who folk dance among her students.

She is also in charge of the Marin Dance Council's annual costume clinic.

SAYS MRS. Everson: "Whenever we have a costume problem, we call on Mrs. Fifield. And she invariably has the answer."

One big source of help is Mrs. Fifield's huge collection of past issues of National Geographic magazines. The folk dancers scan the photographs closely, often using magnifying glasses, to pick up authentic details from the national costumes shown in

MRS. JACK FIFIELD of Tiburon, left, the director of the annual Marin Dance Council Inc. costume clinic, and Edna Pixley of Mill Valley study a design for a Norwegian bodice and apron that the former has copied from an authentic costume in the National Geographic. Finished products are displayed on table along with photo of dancers who used Mrs. Fifield's design for their costumes.

AN ARRAY OF hand embroidered aprons done by Marin folk dancers Mrs. Edna Pixley, Mrs. Scott Tilden, Mrs. Bill D'Alvy and Mrs. J. B. Johns of Terra Linda is admired by Mrs. Jim Rasella of Mill Valley.

Embroidery Is An Art

And It's Essential To Folk Dancers In The Making Of Colorful Costumes

the publication.

Sometimes the magnifying glasses even reveal the kind of stitches used.

DESIGNS FOR the fancy embroidery work are usually drawn freehand by the women, or blocked out on squared paper.

DMC Embroidery Cotton does issue some pamphlets that, while they do not show complete ethnic costumes, do reproduce embroidery designs. These are popular with the Marin women.

Yet another source of information on ethnic costumes and embroidery designs are those folk dancers who have traveled abroad and brought back with them authentic garments from which patterns can be derived.

MOST OF THE work is done in their homes by the folk dancers. However, it is not unusual for them to take their embroidery work along with them to their club meetings and work while the business is being transacted.

For many of the women, the work on the folk costumes constitutes their introduction to embroidering. For others, it marks the resumption of an old and almost forgotten interest they abandoned years ago.

Mrs. Everson belongs to still another group that has remained steadfastly loyal to the handiwork through a period when fine embroidery seemed to be headed for extinction.

SHE SAYS she learned to embroider while attending a girls' school in Oregon as part of her sewing classwork. "We were required to have an embroidery project going on, and to fill in the spare moments in the classroom by working on it."

Since then, she has continued to embroider as one of her favorite pastimes.

She finds the work relaxing. "What's more, there is a great deal of satisfaction in having something before you that you have created with your own hands. It's much like gardening or cooking well. Or, even painting. For embroidering is a form of art, and can be quite creative."

SHE WORKS with an ordinary sewing needle "because larger needles poke holes that are too large in the finer linens."

Most embroiderers today, she adds, use pearl cotton that comes in balls—"similar to crochet cotton"—instead of the old-time embroidery floss. "The pearl cotton doesn't twist or separate like the old floss," she explains.

In order to get the desired range of colors, many of the women order their pearl cotton from a mail order house in Chicago, according to Mrs. Everson.

THEIR WORK is done mostly on linen and heavy homespuns "because it wears better, and because it looks more authentic —like the things done in the old days."

Like folk dancing itself, embroidering seems to be a hobby which appeals more to the older generations than to the young people, Mrs. Everson says.

This is unfortunate, she feels, "because I think we can't afford to discard the old skills."

She sees some hope for a reversal of that trend in what appears to be something of a revival of interest in embroidering —sparked by greater attention to such stitchery in school sewing classes, by such related activities as folk dancing, and by increased overall interest in the fine handcrafts of past generations.

EMBROIDERY dates back into the centuries before Christ, with many peoples of the ancient world using similar kinds of decorative needlework.

It is mentioned in the Bible, and has been found on mummy wrappings of the 15th century B.C. From the remotest times, India, China and Persia used designs in gold and silver thread on velvets or filmy muslins, an art that has remained unchanged for centuries.

Richly embroidered fabrics were introduced into Europe through Byzantine channels.

THE GREAT period of church embroidery was the 12th to 14th centuries.

The 16th century was an era of extravagant magnificence in the costumes of the people, with embroidery work and lace the distinguishing features.

The peasants, unable to afford the silver and gold thread of the gentry, imitated the nobility by improvising with cottons and woolens in bright colors. Eventually, whole villages could be identified by their costumes and the embroidery designs upon them. The designs and the techniques of embroidery were handed down, mother to daughter, even father to son, for then the men, too, spent long winter hours at their embroidery when it was not possible to work in the fields.

EVEN THOUGH embroidery designs came to be characteristic of certain nationalities, or even of specific villages, there was also always individualization by the craftsmen.

Yarns were made at home and the textiles handwoven. Color came from vegetable dyes. Thus, the area of the origin of a piece of embroidery or garment could sometimes be pinpointed by the color—derived from the materials available in the locality.

Vivid colors and lavish embroidery are almost universal among Europe's national costumes. But some patterns are typical of certain nationalities.

THUS UKRANIAN embroidery is typified by cross stitching. This can be done in floral design or geometrically, with no two examples ever identical, all showing individual taste.

A cross stitch canvas, now referred to as Penelope cloth, is tacked over the material to be embroidered and the cross stitching is done through both materials. The canvas acts as even spacing for the stitches and laying out of the design.

When the work is finished, the canvas is easily unraveled and pulled out, leaving the embroidery on the cloth of the garment.

MUCH OF the Ukranian embroidery is done solid so that none of the material is visible.

In copies of Ukranian embroidery, the Marin women use somewhat larger cross stitches and space out the design—"to hasten the job in keeping with our modern pace," Mrs. Everson says.

The Norwegian costume is noted for its beadwork. And the women wear white aprons decorated with hardanger embroidery, an art typical of Scandinavian peoples. It is accomplished by making an outline worked in flat stitch over the threads of the linen apron. The lengthwise threads are then carefully cut and pulled out, leaving the design in the cross threads of the goods.

HUNGARY HAS a wide range of different types of embroidery for its various regions. Those designs are primarily floral, spreading and massive, sometimes covering the entire jacket, bodice or apron.

Most of the Hungarian embroidery work is done in satin stitch and outline stitch. A design resembling the cross-section of a pomegranate is especially popular. Birds are worked in among flowers and leaves.

In the Mezokovesd section of Hungary, large brilliant floral embroidery is done in heavy wools, using orange, red, green and purple colors.

CZECH EMBROIDERY is also lavish, mostly in floral designs done in satin and outline stitchery, but somewhat smaller and more delicate than the Hungarian work.

Czech women sometimes embroider on pieces of felt that are appliqued onto the garment in a design that creates a quilted effect.

In Mexico, every early tribe and often even the smallest pueblas developed their own embroidery styles. Embroidery and weaving have been going on there since before the Conquest, with beautiful handwoven woolens already rich with colorful patterns further embellished by rich embroidery. Unbleached cotton homespuns receive the same treatment.

DESIGNS THERE come from objects of everyday life, such as flowers, birds and animals, or religious objects such as the candelabras.

One primitive tribe, the Huichol of Mayarit, produce an especially elaborate and intricate embroidery of a very fine cross stitch on handwoven cloth that is worn by both men and women.

The Chinantec women of the state of Oaxaca are famed for their beautiful work of extremely colorful solid embroidery applied to gaily striped, handwoven, soft woolen materials.

POLISH EMBROIDERY generally resembles that of Hungary, but is used somewhat less extensively. Yugoslavian work, on the other hand, is quite different, much of it resembling that of our own American Indians. Turkish influence is to be noted in Serbia and Macedonia.

Much of the Yugoslavian embroidery is done by counting threads of the heavy homespun with a weaving or darning stitch. Designs are angular in appearance.

All these cultures and many others will be reflected in the elaborate embroidery work to be seen on the authentic costumes of tomorrow's folk dance participants at Kentfield.

"IT'S ALMOST a trip around the world," says Mrs. Everson.

It is also proof that the art of embroidery has survived the ages and even the 20th century decline of handiwork in the home, and is still very much with us among women with nimble fingers and creative minds.

The Young Man Who Likes Snakes

By BOB COPPOCK

William Gillingham likes reptiles.

He has been interested in snakes and lizards since he was in the third or fourth grade. More recently, however, he has also become interested in insects.

For a time he considered becoming an entomologist instead of a herpetologist.

Now, however, he has decided to stick with his original intent of making reptiles his profession, and closely allied entomology a minor.

GILLINGHAM, 20, of 139 Kent Avenue, Kentfield, is already putting his special knowledge to work at the College of Marin, where he is a student.

He has been hired by the college to take care of animals kept in the biology laboratories. Part of his job includes tramping over Marin hills in search of new specimens. Another part includes hikes to find and bring back live food for the snakes and lizards.

Most of the animals he finds are released shortly after they have been examined by biology students. He does the same with animals in his own collection, which he also makes available to the college for study by the students.

IN FACT, HE once picked up an iguana in Mexico and kept it at home for four years until he could make another trip to Mazatlan to release the beast into its familiar home environment. Last Easter he caught several reptiles on a biology field trip to Death Valley sponsored by the college.

Employed by the college under the federally supported Economic Opportunity Act work-study program, Gillingham worked 15 hours a week during the spring semester. But this summer, he is working 40 hours a week. And in the fall, he will return to the shorter work schedule.

He has been classifying and making an inventory of exhibits

WILLIAM GILLINGHAM isn't at all squeamish about handling snakes. In fact, he plans to make reptiles his career. And right now he works for the College of Marin, where he is a student, taking care of the reptiles and other animals in the biology laboratories. This is a gopher snake, harmless and of benefit to mankind in the control of rodents.

THIS COLLARED LIZARD, found in the deserts of the Southwest and the West, is one of William Gillingham's more colorful charges at the College of Marin. The collar is black with white borders. The spots are gold.

THIS COLLECTION of snakes in the biology laboratories at College of Marin are all non-poisonous, helpful to man in control of rodents and other pests, and all to be found in Marin County. Included are the common king, the common garter, the western racer and the gopher snakes. Bill Gillingham's duties include frequent field trips into the Marin hills to collect such specimens.

THIS HAPPY LITTLE fellow is a South American Cayman, one of the "imports" to be seen in the College of Marin laboratories. He's the personal property of William Gillingham, a gift from his girl friend. But Bill has loaned him to the college for student study purposes.

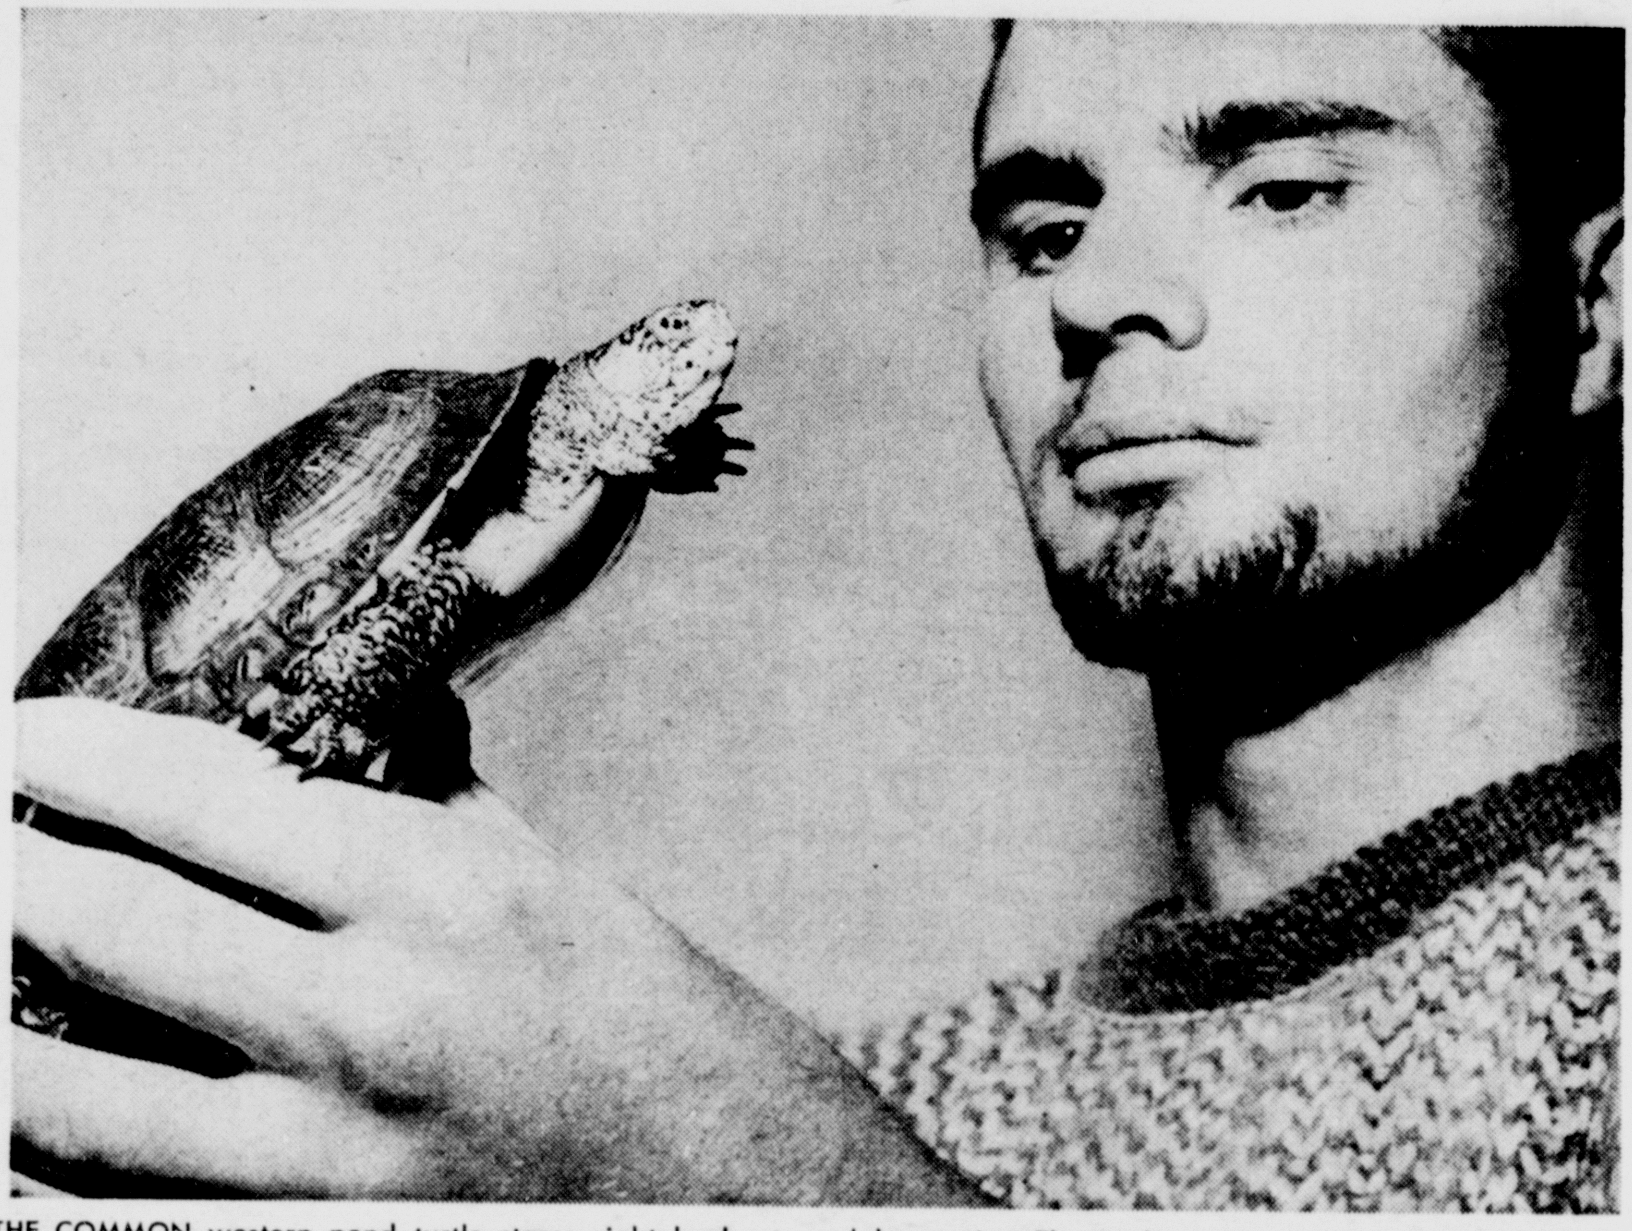
in the laboratory and constructing new boxes to hold more live animals where they can be viewed easily.

ALTHOUGH HE collected mice, lizards and frogs for food for larger animals, Gillingham says he does not believe in dissection, and avoids performing it whenever possible.

In August, he will be heading for Mexico again, expecting to bring back a host of interesting reptiles for the fall biology classes.

Bill says he overcame parental objections to his boyhood hobby of collecting snakes and other reptiles by going about it gradually.

"I just brought a few at a time," he says, "and the folks became accustomed to them as the collection grew."



THE COMMON western pond turtle stares right back at his keeper, William Gillingham. The turtle is one of four making their home in a large sink in the College of Marin laboratories. The turtles adjust easily to a new environment, Gillingham says.

(Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

DESPITE THE encroachment of homes and other manmade facilities into the natural environments of the reptiles, specimens are now more easily found in Marin County than they were when he first began his hunts 10 or 11 years ago, Gillingham says.

"This is because construction is uncovering more and more of them and forcing them out into the open," he believes.

But, he adds, reptiles in Marin will ultimately face the survival problem that confronts all animals when more and more of the wilderness condition in which they thrive gives way to progress.

Why do most people dislike and even fear snakes, the non-poisonous as well as the poisonous?

"I GUESS IT is because they look so slimy and cold to some people," Gillingham says. To him, the markings are quite beautiful. And the feel of the snakeskin is anything but slimy —"really quite dry."

What should a person do if he sees a snake in his yard?

First, Gillingham advises, he should determine if the snake is poisonous or harmless. If a rattlesnake, then the reptile should, of course, be destroyed.

And if non-poisonous?

If the householder can tolerate the presence of such a snake, then he has a very beneficial "pet" in his yard, Gillingham asserts.

FOR INSTANCE, the garter snake eats large quantities of slugs. The gopher and king snakes will destroy mice, rats and other varmints including smaller gophers.

But if the dweller cannot abide the proximity of a snake, in spite of these benefits, he would be wise to trap the reptile in a container and transport it out into the countryside where it can continue to survive and work on mankind's behalf in nature's scheme of things.

"Really, if man would only stop to realize it, the snake is one of his best friends," Bill Gillingham declares.

THE CALIFORNIA king is one of the more colorfully marked snakes entrusted to the care of Bill Gillingham. This is a relatively large specimen, he says, since these harmless snakes do not get much longer than about three and a half feet. They are one of nature's most efficient means of controlling the rodent population.

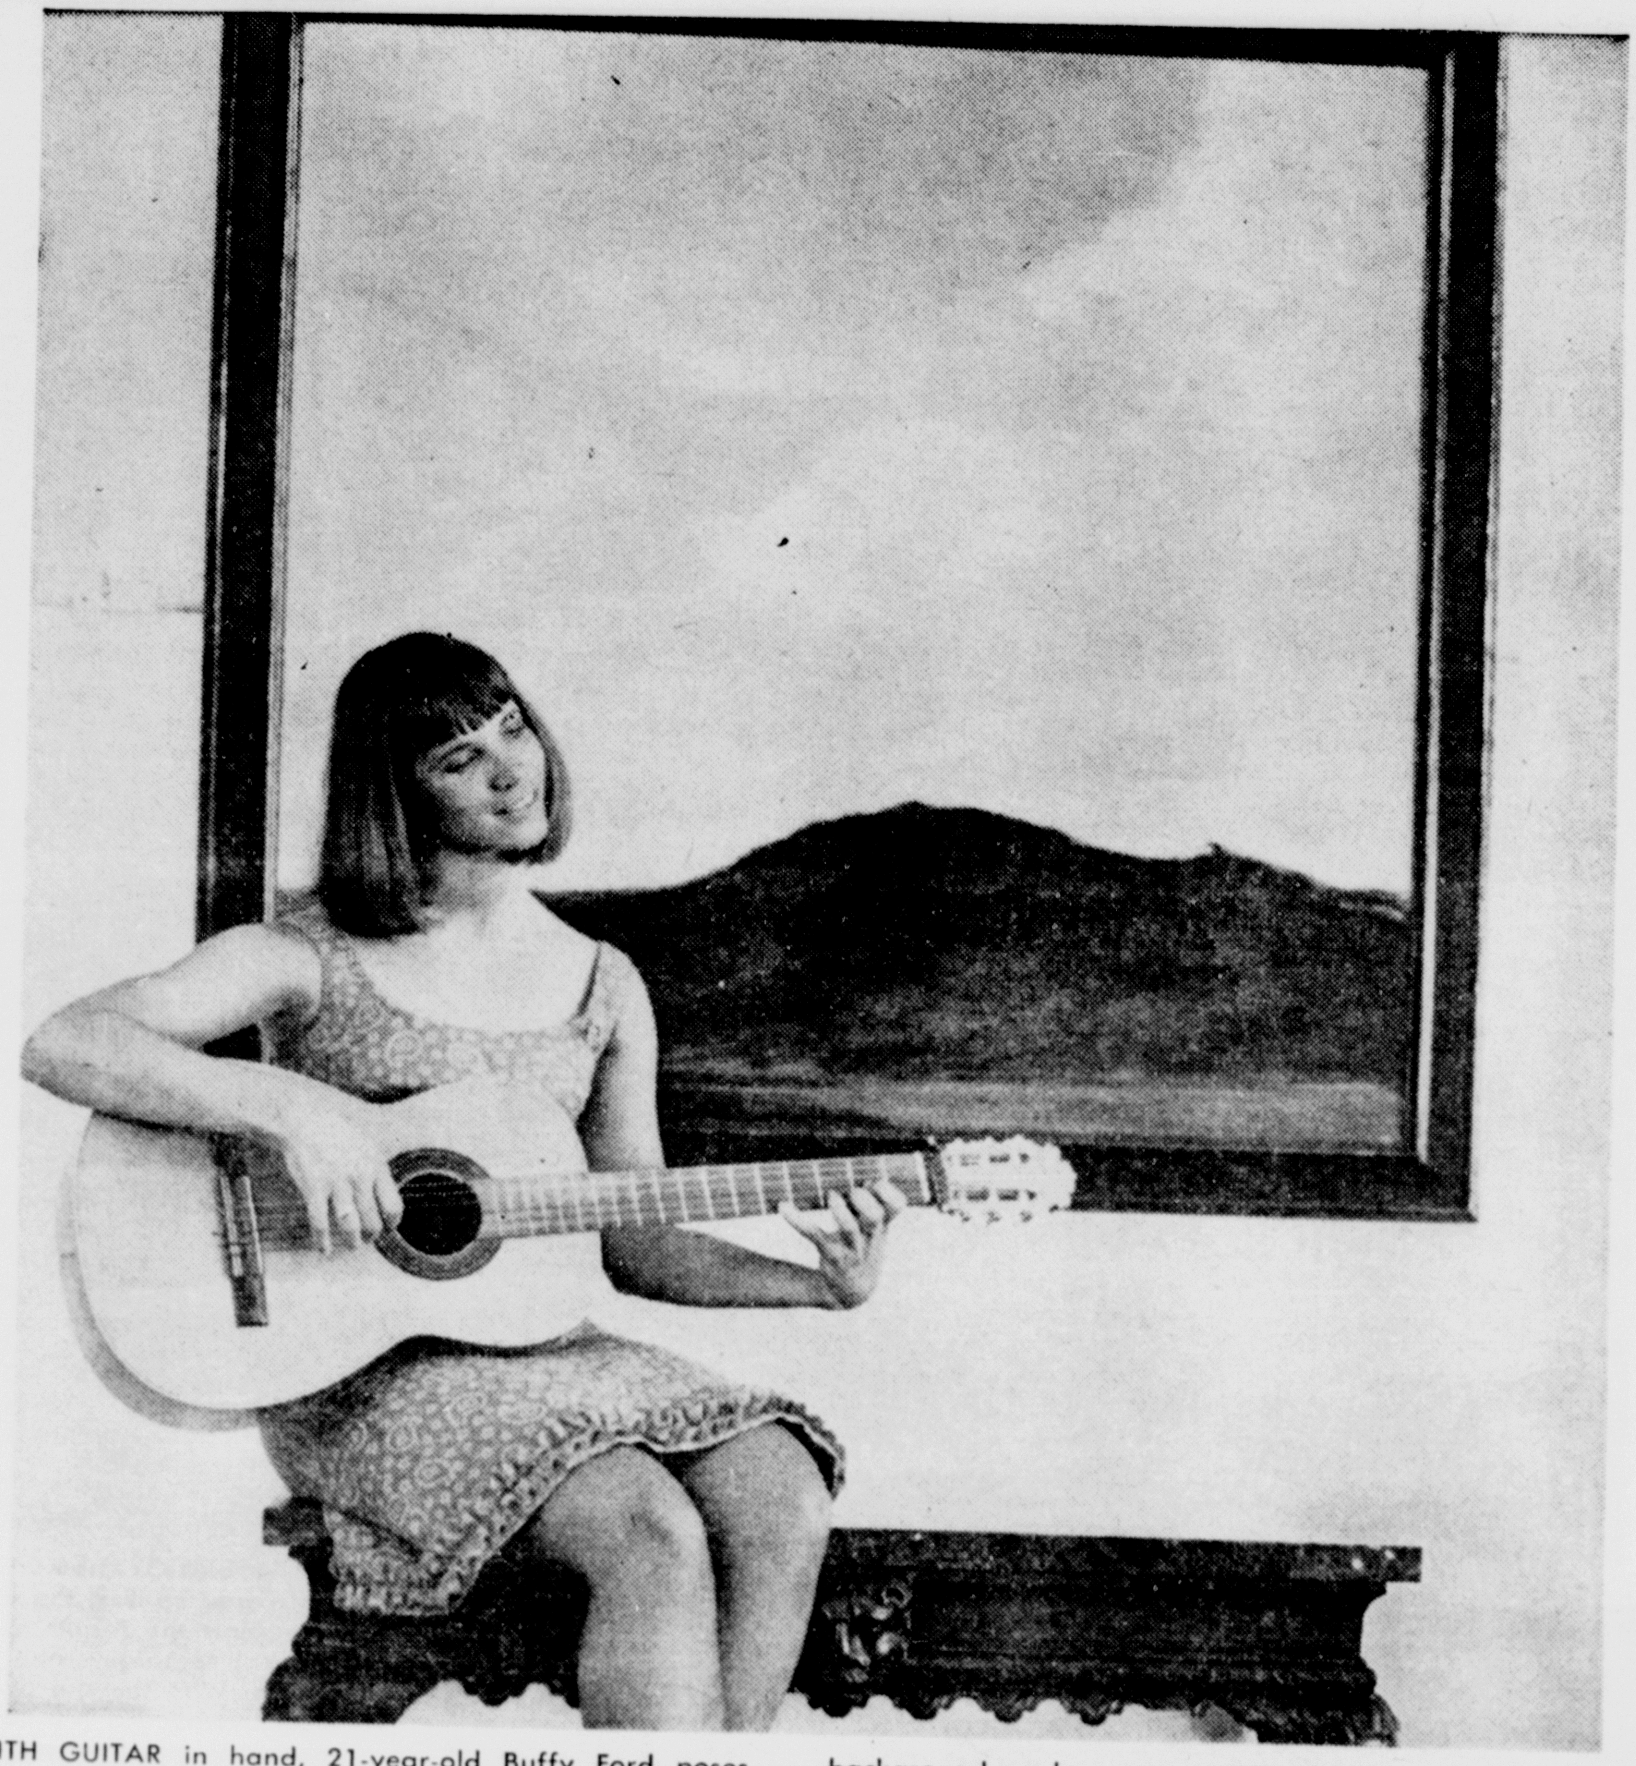
Buffy's Dreams Come True



WITH GUITAR in hand, 21-year-old Buffy Ford poses, seated on an 18th century Chippendale marbletop table in her Buffs Galleries and Fine Antiques in Fairfax. In the background can be seen a canvas of a Marin County scene by Geoffrey Lewis, the well-known Marin artist whose work is included in the current opening show at the new gallery.

Not very long ago Buffy Ford (her real first name is Stephanie) was a Redwood High School student, dreaming, as were so many other youngsters, of a career on the stage.

Buffy is one for whom that dream has come true. In fact, that dream and a lot more.

Already the young Marinite has behind her extensive experience in the professional theater, while an even brighter future lies ahead.

And, indicative of her deep and varied interests in the arts, she recently became an art gallery owner.

HER "BUFFS Galleries and Fine Antiques" in Fairfax is off to a good start with a show that has attracted much favorable critical comment.

Currently on display there are the paintings of Geoffrey Lewis, one of Marin's best known and most widely collected painters; the bronze objective sculpture of Joe Purcell of Sacramento; the drawings of Rubin Atkins of Los Angeles, and the jewelry creations of Anne Dick, another Marin resident.

The show will continue through most of July.

DESPITE THE scope of the art gallery project, the stage remains the first love of Buffy Ford. And her mother, Nancy, operates the gallery (which also serves cheesecake and coffee) while the daughter is on the road.

Buffy can trace the start of her "dream come true" to her high school days when she appeared in "Macbeth" and "Member of the Wedding" in small parts during the summer at the Music Circus in Sacramento.

These were followed by a large part in the "semi-professional" production of "Guys and Dolls" at Sausalito's Gate Theater, and a role in Marin's traditional Mountain Play performance of "Alice in Wonderland."

AND ALWAYS there were lessons, lessons, lessons—singing, dancing, guitar playing, theater techniques, etc.

What Buffy regards as her first big piece of good fortune came when Elizabeth Berryhill, director of the Festival Theater and playwright in residence at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, took the promising young Marin girl under her wing.

She began grooming Buffy for "the big time."

MISS BERRYHILL proved to be a firm believer in the classic

"Can A Brown Cola Stain Be Removed From My Dress?"

You have real trouble. The brown stain has resulted from either the application of heat or from ageing after a period of storage. At any rate, such a stain, usually, cannot be removed from wool or silk. On most other fabrics, especially whittes, bleaching will reduce the stain. However, in a colored fabric if the dye is not fast, bleaching will remove the color too.

The proper action to take when fruit juices, lemonade, peaches, watermelon or any artificially sweetened soft drink or mix is spilled on a fabric is to get it to your professional drycleaner at once. Tell him what you have done. He can remove the stain, even though it is invisable, with pre-spotting. Even though the sweetened liquid does disappear in the fabric, the heat of pressing or simply ageing will cause a brown carmelized stain spot to appear and you may never be able to remove it. discipline as the proper foundation for a professional career. And, says Buffy, her "tutor" placed an emphasis not only upon the mechanics and techniques of acting, but also on "the subjective realities that lie hidden in every art form, whether the theater, painting, sculpture or what have you."

The Festival Theater director has no use for "flash in the pan" types attempting to capitalize on one small facet of his or her talents.

Thus, Buffy Ford looks back on her two years with Festival Theater, performing in the popular summer-time Straw Hat Revues and in some of the more serious productions as well, as "fruitful ones that provided both polish and depth for my talents."

DURING THE off-season, she attended College of Marin and Foothill College.

Then, about a year ago, while attending drama school and taking voice lessons in Hollywood, she auditioned for Johnny Mathis and the Young Americans. Of several hundred interviewed, she was one of 18 chosen and put under contract.

Buffy returned this spring from a nationwide tour with the fast-rising Young Americans, having performed across the country at universities, in nightclubs and in auditoriums to audiences described by Variety as "large and enthusiastic."

THE TOUR was followed by an appearance with Tennessee Ernie Ford at Anaheim's Melody-Land, just across the street from Disneyland. A one-week run averaged 3,000 people nightly.

There have also been television appearances with the Young Americans on the Johnny Carson and Ed Sullivan shows.

Now, after rehearsals in Hollywood, the Young Americans are again on tour with Johnny Mathis, bound for eastern Canada, New England and New York. There is a strong possibility that Buffy will be seen on either a Danny Kaye or Ernie Ford TV show this fall.

BUFFY, JUST turned 21, neither smokes nor drinks. She has many boy friends, but says she has yet to decide on THE one.

She says her interest in fine arts has been a long one and a deep one.

"I feel that there is a 'grass roots' movement in this country demanding good representational art," she says.

It is upon that theory that her Buffs Galleries and Fine Antiques rests—"high caliber art in an elegant setting."

Her gallery, she says, compares favorably with the best in Northern California.

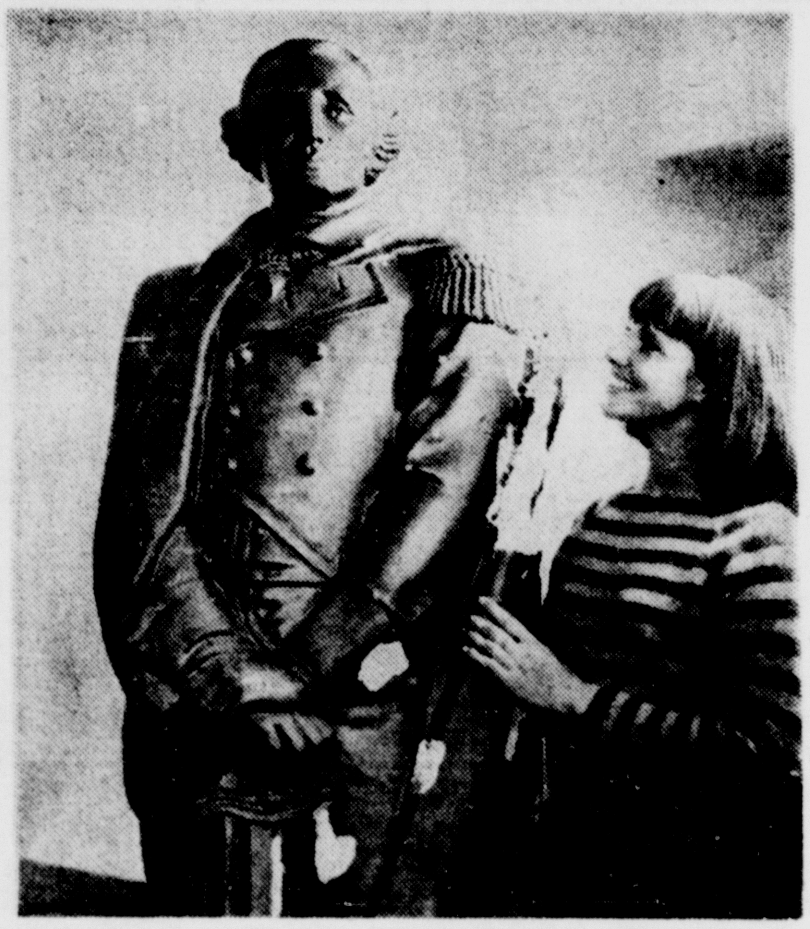
WHY DID she choose Fairfax as her site?

Because, she answers, she likes the unspoiled western flavor of that locality with its hills and with its people "who seem less touched by the embroilments and turbulences of these days than they appear to be elsewhere."

Besides, she adds, it was in Fairfax, some 25 years ago, that her mother and father became engaged.

The gallery, she admits, will never supercede or replace the theater as her principal interest.

But it does provide her with yet another means of satisfying her artistic urges, and, at the same time, of repaying her Marin friends for the help they have provided in boosting her along the way toward making that dream of high school days come true.



THIS STATUE of George Washington, now a little the worse for wear, but still maintaining the full dignity of the Father of Our Country, once stood in a place of honor in the Palace of Fine Arts at San Francisco's 1915 World Fair. It was rescued by Buffy Ford, who is seen here with it, from discards, and is now on permanent exhibit at her Buffs Galleries and Fine Antiques in Fairfax, casting a stern eye upon the other displays. It is a massive and handsome piece of realistic sculpture.

BUFFS GALLERIES and Fine Antiques is also a coffee house, featuring cheesecake. Young owner Buffy Ford tempts Geoffrey Lewis and 3-year-old daughter Paulette with some of the delectable cheesecake by Reggie Randall.

Marin Rode In The Gemini 4

By RICHARD LYTTLE

Parts of Marin were aboard the Gemini 4 capsule that gave astronauts James McDivitt and Edward White their thrill-packed 1,700,000 mile ride around the earth.

The parts were vital to the success of the space odyssey.

They were diodes produced by the Fairchild semiconductor plant in San Rafael. The 775 workers there thus had a big hand in the success of the orbital flight.

THE TINY PARTS produced in Marin were in the device that provided guidance for the capsule. They were also in the sensitive instruments used to monitor the blood pressures of the astronauts during the flight, and in the computer used to plot the re-entry.

This computer, incidentally, failed to go on at a crucial moment, but it has been operated successfully after landing—which seems to prove that the locally made diodes were not to blame.

What is a diode?

THAT IS AN easy query to make, but tough even for an engineer to answer in layman's language. He almost has to use his hands, a blackboard and a few technical terms which lead inevitably to more explanations.

James V. Diller, product engineer at Fairchild's San Rafael plant, said that a diode is a device that allows electrical current to pass only in one direction. At the same time, it amplifies the current.

The Fairchild plant makes its diodes out of silicon. That is one of several semiconductors of current. Diamonds are also semiconductors, but their use would add somewhat to the expense of an already expensive product.

DILLER EXPLAINED that the properties of the semiconductor can be altered by introducing impurities. Fairchild uses phosphorous and boron. The phosphorous puts a minus charge in the silicon, while the boron gives it a plus charge.

The meeting of these two charged areas within the silicon is what provides the characteristics of a diode.

Varying the process, Diller said, gives diodes with varying properties. He spoke of breakdown value, forward current, leakage current and switching time.

HOW DO YOU measure these things?

Diller said that measurement and testing are one of the vital parts of the business. In producing a diode, you actually get a "family" of diodes, and it is the group of like individuals within this family that will meet a specific use.

Others can find other uses, still others will have to be discarded.

One of the challenges to measurement is the exactitude needed.

DILLER SPOKE of nanoseconds—that is the time it takes light or electricity to travel one foot. A device has been perfected that will measure speeds as fine as a quarter of a nanosecond, Diller said.

Diodes might operate that fast, but it takes much longer to make them.

The "raw" products at the San Rafael plant are wafers of silicon about the size of a quarter but much thinner, perhaps the thickness of three sheets of this newspaper pressed together.

The wafers come from Fairchild's Mountain View plant. After a bath, one of the first treatments they receive is a bake in a 1,000 degree centigrade oven filled with phosphorus.

THEY COME OUT of the oven permeated on both sides with phosphorous ions. This gives them a negative charge.

Next step is to grind away one side, freeing it of the phosphorous. This is done by rotary grinding tables or lappers that use a very fine abrasive.

Ed Reed, general foreman in charge of wafer preparation, explained that the process is slow and thus the lapper portion of production operates around the clock on three shifts, while the rest of his shop is on a two-shift schedule.

THE WAFER next gets an oxide coating on both sides, and one side gets the added protection of a coat of wax.

The unwaxed side then is etched with a grid of fine dots. The wafers then go back to the ovens where they are baked in an atmosphere of boron.

The boron, with its plus electrical charge, permeates the wafer through the etched opening. The chemical spreads laterally as well as down, thus placing the connection between the two electronic differentials well under the protective oxide.

THIS PROCESS was developed by Fairchild in 1958 and put on the market in 1960. Called the Planar process, it revolutionized the semiconductor business and put Fairchild at the top of the industry.

The big advantage of the method is that the connections between the two layers in the wafer are protected by the oxide coating.

After the wafers leave the boron ovens, they receive a coating of gold. This conductor is used because it resists oxidation and bonds well with the silicon.

THROUGHOUT ALL these steps, the wafer is repeatedly tested for thickness and proper conductivity. After one final electronic test, the wafer goes into the assembly area of the plant.

Here it is first etched and broken into tiny squares or dice. In the center of each die is the dot etched there to receive the boron treatment. The indentation is now filled with gold.

The die is ready to be placed into its glass insulation case.

IN THE ASSEMBLY process, the wire leads are connected as the cases are assembled. A final backing process seals the tiny glass case and the diode is ready to function.

Fred B. Bialek, manager of the Fairchild plant, said that the firm produces the vitals for about 22 missile systems.

Strangely enough, there is not much secrecy involved in these government contracts. Bialek said the main reason for secrecy in the electronic industry at this level is due to competitors.

"IT IS FIERCELY competitive," he said. He did not want to give out any production figures for this reason.

Paul M. Mahon, industrial relations manager for the firm, said that about half of Fairchild's production now goes to government contracts. The rest is for private industry, mainly computer manufacturers.

Fairchild, just as other firms in the field, must often help customers design circuits and systems in order to determine their needs for diodes.

THE BUSINESS is changing constantly, and a new development can quickly make obsolete a product.

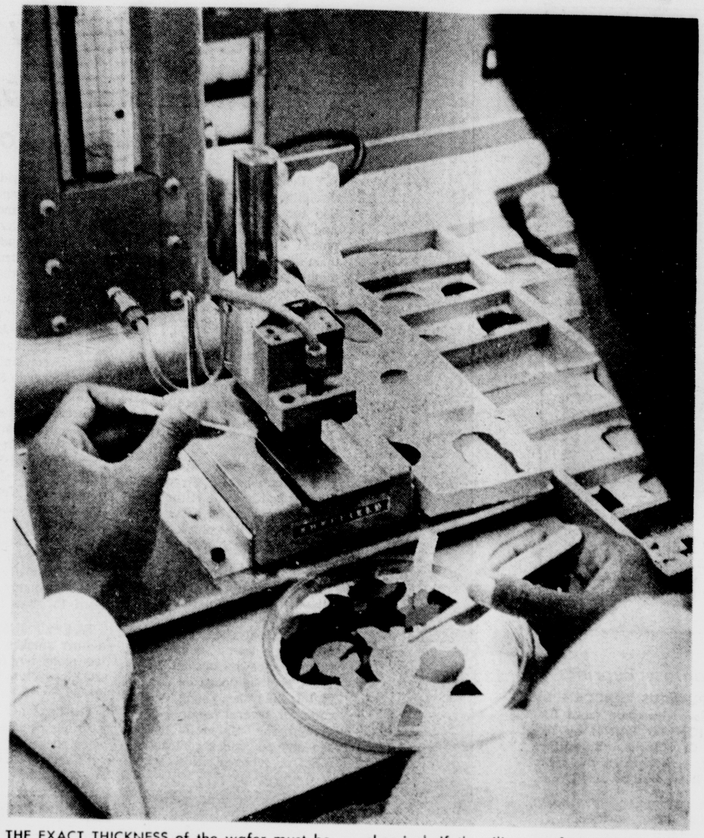
But the San Rafael plant, established in November, 1960, will be here some time. Bialek said that conversion of 5,000 square feet of unused floor space on the second level of the production area is now in progress.

"There are more complex devices, more functional ones all the time," Bialek said. "We're growing."

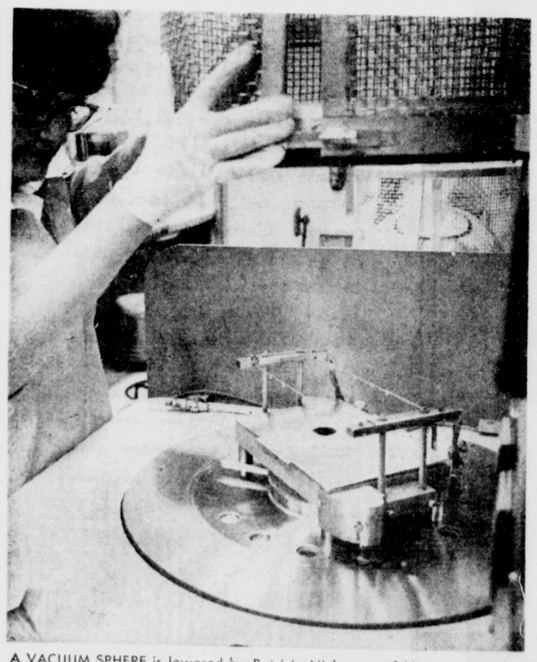
COVER PHOTO

DIODES, the end product coming off the Fairchild semiconductor plant assembly line, are tested by Sandra Overstreet so as to be grouped according to values. It is just one step in the testing process. All of the employees on the production line are women. Foremen and engineers are the only males in the plant. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

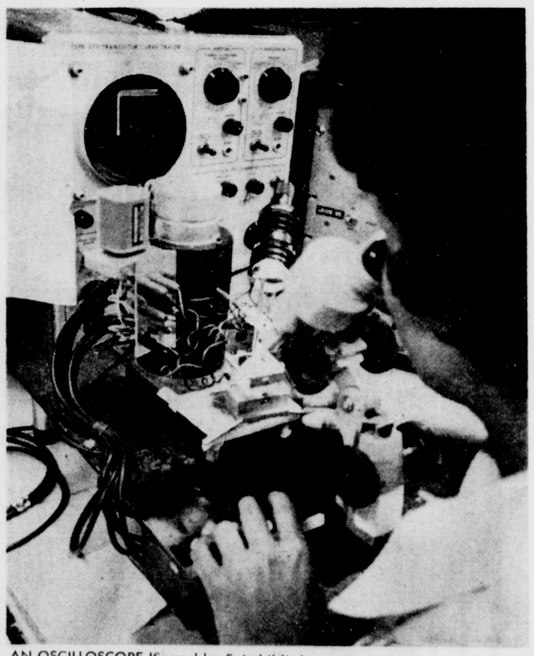
IN THE LAPPING ROOM of the Fairchild semiconductor plant in San Rafael, Gail Ball of Petaluma uses compressed nitrogen to cleanse a silicon wafer. The lapping process grinds away one side of the phosphate-treated wafer. The wafers are handled some 50 times before they are ready to be cut into dice for diodes. One small wafer can produce 2,000 tiny dice.



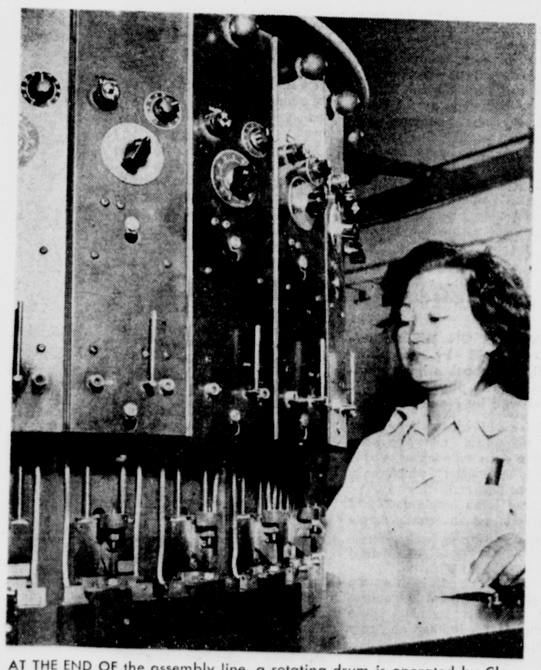
THE EXACT THICKNESS of the wafer must be known before they are put in the boron ovens at the Fairchild plant. The thicker they are, the longer they must bake to infuse the chemical. If the silicon wafers are too thick, they are returned to the lapping room for still more grinding. If they are too thin, they are discarded as not usable.



A VACUUM SPHERE is lowered by Patricia Nickerson of Novato over this mounting that includes two wire filaments. When the bowl is set and the air pumped out, the filaments are heated, causing them to melt into small twists of gold. The melted gold is diffused throughout as a vapor, covering everything including the wafer that shows here as a small black circle.



AN OSCILLOSCOPE IS used by Fairchild's Laura Dunlap to run a final test of a wafer guaranteeing its perfection before it moves on into the assembly room to be broken up and put into insulated packages for diodes. Here she is checking for breakdown current. The magnification is needed in order to line up the test contact on the individual contact points.



AT THE END OF the assembly line, a rotating drum is operated by Clara Mertz of Vallejo. Heated filaments which appear here as white dots near the bottom of the drum weld the glass capsule surrounding the diodes. She fits the capsule halves together as the machine turns before her. The completed diodes will be lifted out of the drum automatically.

An Old Pro

FAIR FIGHTS AND FOUL by Thurman Arnold, Harcourt, Brace and World, 285 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The name of Thurman Arnold is not now the household word it was when his "The Folklore of Capitalism" was rattling the branches of an already-shaken American complacency; but time has polished, rather than dulled, his wit.

"Fair Fights and Foul" bears the sub-title: "A Dissenting Lawyer's Life," but this is misleading. It is not much of an autobiography, except in its first lusty chapters on his youth in Wyoming.

It is rather a look at the law, as practiced in the United States, through the eyes of an attorney who loves it but recognizes its foibles and inanities. And along with this, it is a look at much in American economics and society that may not be wrong, but is certainly not quite right.

The onetime New Deal trustbuster has not mellowed with age; he is like the old pro pitcher who depends more on control than on the blazing fast ball.

What Arnold has to say is best said in his own inimitable style, and it would be unfair to attempt to capture its flavor in a brief quotation. "The Folklore of Capitalism" was a best-seller in its day. His new volume is not likely to be so, for it comes at a time when Americans are basking in a delusion much like that of the '20s, rather than the disillusion of the later decade into which Arnold dropped his octavo block-buster.

But, though it may not sell so well, what Arnold has to say may be of more importance to the sophisticated, amoral image-makers of the '60s than it was to the confused victims of the Great Depression. For, as he writes, "The term 'image' was not in use at that time, because everybody still believed in principles."

Thurman Arnold still believes in principles, and he has a compelling way of advancing them.

FREEHAND DRAWING by Philip Thiel, University of Washington Press, 126 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

As an instructor of naval architecture and visual design at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the universities of California and Washington, Philip Thiel has taught freehand drawing to both daytime and evening students.

The technique he has devised has been incorporated into this primer for beginning drawers.

His method is based upon a series of problems or exercises, requiring the incisive use of line and the development of a sensitivity to form qualities. There is a gradual increase in the difficulty of these problems to enable the student to grow in ability and confidence.

Thiel warns at the outset, however, that success will not come easily. Freehand drawing, he says, is a considerable accomplishment, requiring an expenditure of time. But the end product, he adds, is well worth the investment.

You begin with boxes and work your way through human features, et al, to moving figures.

The manual is simple in its directions and the program outlined by Thiel would seem both practical and effective.

HISTORY OF THE EXPEDITION UNDER THE COMMAND OF LEWIS AND CLARK edited by Elliott Coues, Dover, 3 volumes, paperback, total 1,243 pages, $2.25 per volume. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Meriwether Lewis died without completing preparation of the history of the expedition that he and William Clark led from St. Louis to the mouth of the Columbia in Oregon. From his journals and those of Clark, Nicholas Biddle in 1814 prepared the "History of the Expedition Under the Command of Lewis and Clark."

In 1893, Elliott Coues, former army surgeon and Geological Survey secretary, enlarged Biddle's history with profuse commentary, drawn largely from Lewis's and Clark's journals and field notebooks and the account written and published by Patrick Gass. It is this edition that Dover Publications has now reprinted as a three-volume paperback.

Maps of the route drawn by both explorers are appended as fold-out end-pieces.

What Biddle edited out, Cues largely restored. In re-publishing this thick three-volume set (it was in four volumes as originally published by Harper in 1893, but has not been abridged), Dover has made readily available one of the greatest and most interesting original source-books of American history—the story of the expedition that opened the West, told by the men who led it.

THE ARCHAEOLOGY OF SAN FRANCISCO by Robert C. Suggs, Thomas Y. Crowell Co., 136 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"The Archaeology of San Francisco" is a somewhat misleading title for Robert C. Suggs' slender volume. San Francisco itself is so lacking in archaeological findings that perforce Suggs' book deals with those in the surrounding country.

The volume is a combination of description of how archaeologists have worked in excavating Indian shell mounds in several parts of the Bay Area, and of the Indians who left them—as envisioned from the rather sparse evidence the mounds yield.

Suggs has written in a style which should prove readable for the junior high or high school student.

"Archaeology of San Francisco" as a quickie description of archaeological findings in the Bay Area is interesting and informative.

THE KING OF SCHNORRERS by Israel Zangwill, Dover, 103 pages, $1. Reviewed by Jean Langham.

This slim and attractively packaged volume is a fine example of the unique contribution being made by one segment of the paperback industry.

It is a reprint of a once popular work by a minor author, a contemporary of Shaw and Chesterton, and is accompanied by an interesting and scholarly introduction by Maurice Wohlgelernter who has done the definitive study.

It is also a very funny book, one of the classics of Jewish humor.

The schnorrer or beggar in question is one Manasseh Bueno Brabillai Azevedo da Costa, and if you think you can "get it wholesale" you should see this guy operate. While being hilarious of themselves, his pranks also serve to illustrate the evils of ghetto life and the petty prejudices which thrived within as well as without its solid walls.

It is a refreshing treat to read wholesome humor in a well constructed framework. And for a dollar, who needs wholesale?

MARIN'S MARINERS should enjoy "The Inland Sea," the Doubleday-published account by author Morton M. Hunt of his two-week cruise of Long Island Sound and its varied harbors aboard the 33-foot sloop Merrywend. Hunt also includes some witty comment on modern man. Another of the series of historical novels brought back by Ballantine in reprint, this novel is set in Rome in its last days, with a succession of Illryian emperors of short tenure. One of the more famous was Aurelian, who had distinguished himself on the battlefield as the Goths and Persians threatened the "civilized world." The story is told through the eyes of his wife, daughter of a Roman senator, and ruler in her own right as empress while Aurelian was leading the Roman legions against the northern invaders.

Both reprints, the two books offer two dozen stories that remain untarnished by the fact they may have been read before in collections or in science fiction and fantasy magazines.

Clarke is an English scientist whose interests range from the light-years of astronomy to the microcosm of the Australian Barrier Reef. His yarns, about the best-liked here that any Briton has sent across the Atlantic since H. G. Wells, concentrate on the man of today or tomorrow and problems of his environment.

Sturgeon might be called a modern Edgar Allen Poe. His collection centers on the man of most anytime, and the problems—sometimes creepy—in his own mind.

More Ghostly Goings-On From Parapsychologist Hans Holzer

BY DON KEOWN

Say "ghost hunter" and one immediately thinks of a debunker of the spirit world.

Hans Holzer, however, is of a different ilk. He defends ghosts—or, at least, he upholds their "existence."

He has followed up his "Ghost Hunter" with a second book, "Ghosts I've Met," that is yet another series of case histories of supernatural happenings.

His title, however, is somewhat misleading.

For the most part, Holzer has not met the ghosts that populate his book at all. He has simply heard about them, visited their supposed haunts and listened to the stories of those who have claimed to have had ghostly experiences, always accepting those stories at full value.

Holzer's visits to haunted houses, poltergeist infestations and places of psychic experiences seldom qualify as investigations. There are exceptions in which Holzer has called upon clairvoyants to assist him in making contact with the restless spirits, experiments in which he claims success. If the results were as recorded by Holzer, then, indeed, they are a bit unsettling to us skeptics.

There are also those few occasions upon which Holzer claims to have personally seen, heard or felt the presence of ghostly creatures, and upon at least one occasion even to have photographed them.

"Ghosts I've Met" includes a log of psychie experiences brought to Holzer's attention during a hurried European trip, as well as American ghostly goings-on.

We're never quite sure just how serious Holzer is about all this. The feeling that he is putting us on at least a bit persists. But he maintains a deadpan air of seriousness throughout.

It is doubtful that his book will win him many converts to what he calls parapsychology—especially not among those of us who have read earlier books questioning the things that Holzer accepts. In his sometimes imaginative interpretations of the motives of his spirits, he neither refutes or explains away satisfactorily the objections voiced by these disbelievers—for instance, the frequent presence of boys of the age of mischief in households subject to poltergeist activities, or the predominance of aging floors and beams and infirm foundations among the structures in which mysterious night sounds are reported.

Nevertheless, stories such as railroader Joe Baldwin swinging a lantern along a lonely stretch of railroad track in North Carolina as he supposedly hunts for his lost head, or the Swiss family and their pets harassed by lively poltergeists, or the historic English manor houses bewitched by centuries-old spirits, etc., all make for fascinating reading. You need not be convinced "scientifically" in order to be intrigued. And we found the book highly entertaining.

The inclusion of some photographs of the supposed haunts—and, of course, that print Holzer claims to have taken of a procession of ghostly monks—would have been a wise addition.

GHOSTS I'VE MET by Hans Holzer, Bobbs - Merrill, 308 pages, $5.

INSECTS FROM CLOSE UP by Eleanor Ivanye Fanning and Harry F. Brevoort, Crowell, 150 pages, $6.95.

"INSECTS FROM Close Up" is an excellent introduction to basic entomology on the layman's level, with text by natural scientist and wildlife writer Eleanor Ivanye Fanning and photographs by the widely known transplanted Californian Harry F. Brevoort, now living in Connecticut.

In easy - to - follow language, Mrs. Fanning offers a wealth of interesting information on insect habits. But while her part of this endeavor is handled with fine competence, it is the photographic work of Brevoort that will capture the major applause. Reproduced in larger-than-life size and in superb clarity, his close-ups of bugs — more than 100 in all — offer readers a rare opportunity to really examine and appreciate the anatomical construction of these small but complex creatures. The illustrations alone are of such exceptional quality as to be worth the price of the book. And Brevoort has added some commentary about the special technique of photographing insects.

The book is an excellent means of introducing young would-be naturalists to an especially fascinating but too often overlooked aspect of the teeming life around them. But it is also quite serviceable as a reference work for all ages, or simply as entertaining and enlightening reading and "looking" matter.

THE VERMONT publishing house, the Stephen Greene Press, devoted to the perpetuation of New England lore and history, has always had a special fondness for the region's colorful covered bridges.

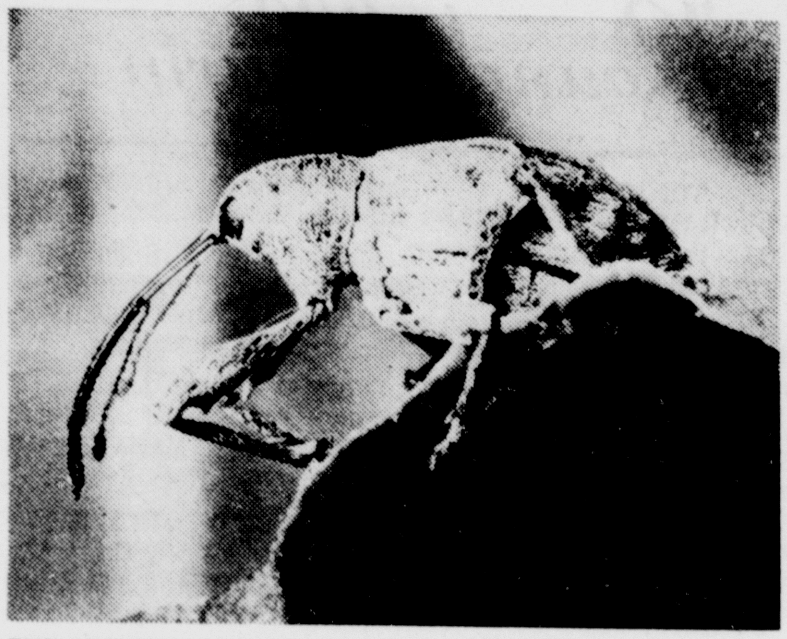
Latest result of that affection is "Kissing Bridges" by Hegen Petersen, $3.50 clothbound, $1.50 paperback.

Petersen's informative and interesting history of the picturesque structures is accompanied by illustrations from the superb Richard Sanders Allen collection.

The result is a total treat for students of early Americana.

VACATIONERS may find the booklet, "Guide Book of Factory and Plant Tours in the United States," helpful.

It is available for $1 from "Guide Book," Post Office Box 8626, Washington, D.C., 20011, and lists hundreds of free guided tours through industrial plants that are available across the country.



THE WOOLLY WEEVIL uses his sharp proboscis to bore holes in acorns and other hard seeds. This is one of more than 100 black-and-white photographs included in the new Eleanor Ivanye Fanning-Harry F. Brevoort nature book, "Insects From Close Up."

The Stereo Scene With Sunier

SCHUBERT: Marche Caracteristique, Fantasy in f; HINDEMITH: Sonat for Piano Four Hands (1938); RALPH SHAPEY: Seven for Piano Four Hands — Milton and Peggy Salkind, piano — Friends of Four Hands Music SKD 1027:

This Mill Valley couple are known around the country for their championing of the piano-four-hands literature. Now their own record label should help to disseminate their fine performances ever more widely, although it lacks the visual interest of watching two people at one piano play music as complex as this without getting tangled in each other's arms.

The Hindemith work seemed to me the most successful from a point of view of both composition and performance.

The Schubert "Fantasy" has been recorded several times previously. It is unfortunate the FFHM did not see fit to release the album in stereo also, because the slight directionality of bass to treble range would add clarity to the lines of the pieces.

This album is now available at several different record shops around Marin County.

STRAVINSKY: L'Histoire du Soldat — Jean Cocteau / Peter Ustinov / Jean-Marie Fertey / septet conducted by Igor Markevich — Philips Stereo PHS900-046:

Throw out all your other versions of this stage-piece-with-music. This one is it!

The performance was presented to the Swiss town of Vevey by one of its former residents—Markevich. With the late Cocteau as the narrator, and Peter Ustinov as the devil, plus a number of improvements in the spoken lines to aid in dramatic effect, the general impression is compelling from beginning to end.

A plus is the original cover art drawn by Cocteau especially for the European release of the recording.

SAINT-SAENS: Violin Concerto No. 3 in b; VIEUXTEMPS: Violin Concerto No. 5 in a — Arthur Grumiaux / Lamoureux Orchestra/Manuel Rosenthal — Philips Stereo PHS 900-061:

Two violin concerto standards and good performances.

RAVEL: Bolero, La Valse, Ma Mere l'Oye—London Symphony Orchestra/Pierre Monteux — Philips Stereo PHS 900-059:

This must have been one of the last recordings by the late endearing French conductor. He sounded a bit tired and uninspired it must be admitted. "Bolero" when uninspired is deadly. Sound was muddy.

TELEMANN: The Passion of Jesus According to Mark — Agnes Giebel / Ira Malaniuk / Heinx Rehfuss/Horst Gunter/ Theo Altmeyer / Choeur des Jeunes/Pro Arte Orchestra of Munich/Kurt Redel — Philips Stereo PHS 2-930:

World premiere recording of this liturgical newly brought to light by conductor Redel from a few copies of the singing parts dating from 1769.

The double-disc package includes a complete printing of the German libretto but only a summary of it in English listed later, making it rather difficult to find one's place.

While at the time Telemann was considered avant-garde compared to Bach, his stressing of melody and simple harmony seem today to place him in a more conservative style than the rich counterpoint structures of his friend Johann Sebastian Bach. Perhaps we need to hear much more Telemann to develop the same appreciation of his genius that we have of Bach's, but presently I find this work less effective than the Bach "Passions."

TREAD SOFTLY

The dreams of youth die hard, painfully,
Though they fain would stay and
Linger awhile, still in time, they too
Will go, too weary and numbed from
Their battle with today and the aching
Remembrance of yesterday to Struggle on, leaving but a scattered
House of cards in their stead.

How quickly the tide rolls in, snuffing
Out the candle of our hopes and
Taking the warm summer days of our youth
By surprise, while the Castles we molded so lovingly with
Our hands, crumble slowly back
To sand and we are left with Little but empty fingers and Painful regrets to show for all our pains.

So tread softly when you walk
Among my dreams, though they may Seem vain, still they are mine,
Being more precious unto my heart
Than all your gold. Verily friend,
Tread softly when you walk among my Dreams, for of what materials are there
Tell me, quite so fragile and easily
Lost as youth and its dreams?

NOVATO — STEVE HORSMAN

GOD IS LOVE

God, God
Praise to thee.
I cannot speak.
There is no need.
In the silence you say all.
To my soul, you know me.
God is love,
Love which passes understanding.
I close my eyes.
There are no sounds but
The soft croaking of frogs
And the slap of water on the shore.
On my knees, on my knees.
God, God.

Why Nails Are Penny Sizes

If you wrinkle your forehead in uncertainty when the instructions for a woodworking project call for the use of 8d nails, don't despair.

Nearly everybody does the same thing.

The term penny for nail length is an inheritance from antiquity. The letter d is from the Latin word "denarius," meaning penny. And the term was used in medieval England to designate the number of nails of a given size sold for a penny; thus, a pennyweight.

ALL NAILS COME in standard lengths.

The so-called common nail is just as long for a given penny size as most other types, such as box nails, casing nails, finishing nails, cut nails and the various specially treated or threaded nails. Only a few unusual types are a bit shorter.

As a rule, the longer nails are thicker than the shorter ones of any kind, although there are common different kinds.

SINCE ALL THAT may be a little confusing, here are some of the standard lengths of common nails for the various penny sizes: 1½ inches-4d; 1¾ inches-5d; 2 inches-6d; 2¼ inches-7d; 2½ inches-8d; 2¾ inches-9d; 3 inches-10d. (You might clip this out for future reference.)

Research on nailed joints shows that the strongest joint is obtained with a nail long enough to penetrate at least two-thirds of its length into the piece of wood holding the point.

The head size or shape of a nail is important if "blind" nailing or "set" nailing is to be done. For these purposes, finishing or casing nails, with very small heads, are used.

BLIND NAILING usually is used to put down tongue-and-grooved flooring, siding or paneling. The nails are driven into one edge of the piece at the base of the tongue. Set nailing is done by driving the nail below the surface with a punch-like tool called a nail set. The head is then concealed with a putty.

The fastening research specialist at the U.S. Forest Products Laboratory in Madison, Wis., John A. Scholten, says that splitting is a hazard with certain kinds of wood if nails are driven too near the ends or edges of a piece. He names these woods as oak, maple, southern pine and Douglas fir.

The splitting can be prevented by buying special blunt-pointed nails, blunting the points of ordinary nails or predrilling pilot holes for nails with sharp points.

THE STEEL CHIMNEY on a freestanding fireplace in the living room of the Steel Homes Inc. house at Trestle Glen Terrace, Tiburon Peninsula, runs the full height to the ceiling. The exposed steel beams have been painted a warm chocolate brown to blend with the living room's walnut-paneled end wall.

A New England Style Home Framed In Steel

vantages of a custom built home.

Floyd Derieux of Tiburon and Robert Willis of Ventura, the partnership behind Steel Homes Inc., selected the Trestle Glen Terrace site for two specific reasons.

First, the hillside lot helps demonstrate the adaptability of steel-framed design and secondly, the lot is in a prominent location clearly visible from the heavily - traveled Tiburon Boulevard.

THE USE OF Bethlehem Steel Corp. eight and 10-inch wide-flange steel beams for the "rib-cage" framing allows the structure to be erected in less than a full working day. The frame, fabricated by Vallejo Solano Steel Co., makes use of high strength bolts for field connections.

Designed by Paul M. Cassayre and David L. Paoli of Napa, the house features an extensive use of pre - fabricated stressed skin four-by-10 foot plywood sandwich panels for floor, roof and outer walls. The panels which provide insulation as well as structural reinforcement are quickly installed between the steel frame members, using metal attaching clips.

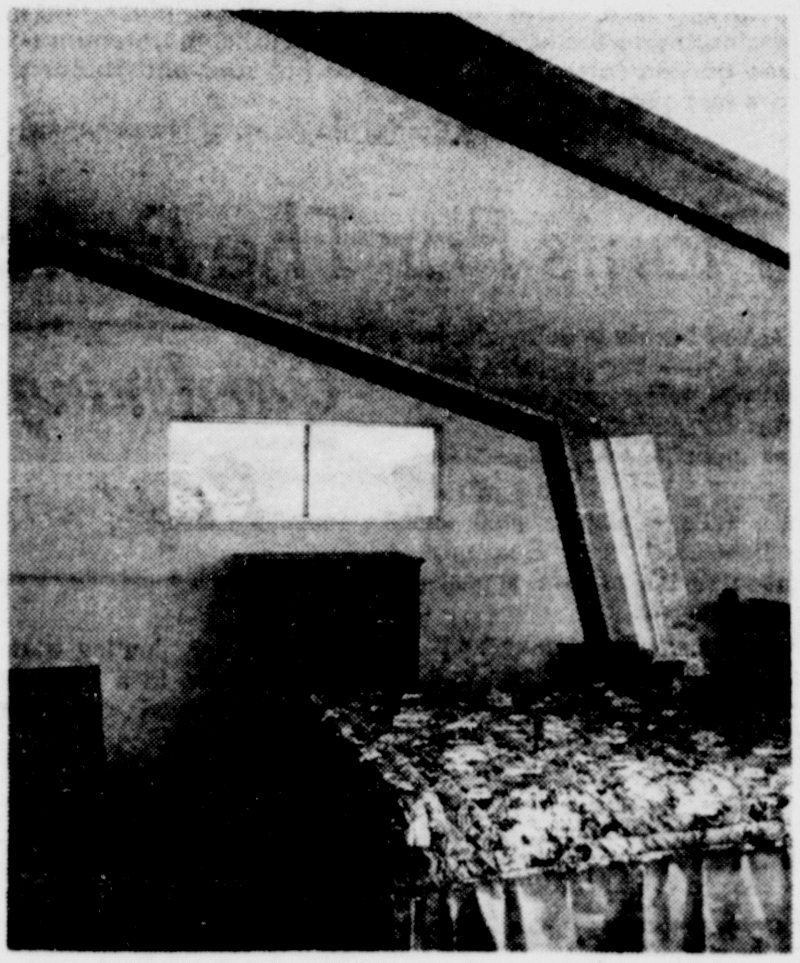
By combining the cost-saving advantages of steel framing and pre-fabrication, Derieux figures construction cost is already competitive with other building methods — even though the firm hasn't yet moved into mass production of the units.

"WHEN WE DO get into mass production," Derieux adds, "the steel framed units will be by far the least expensive way to build a quality hillside home."

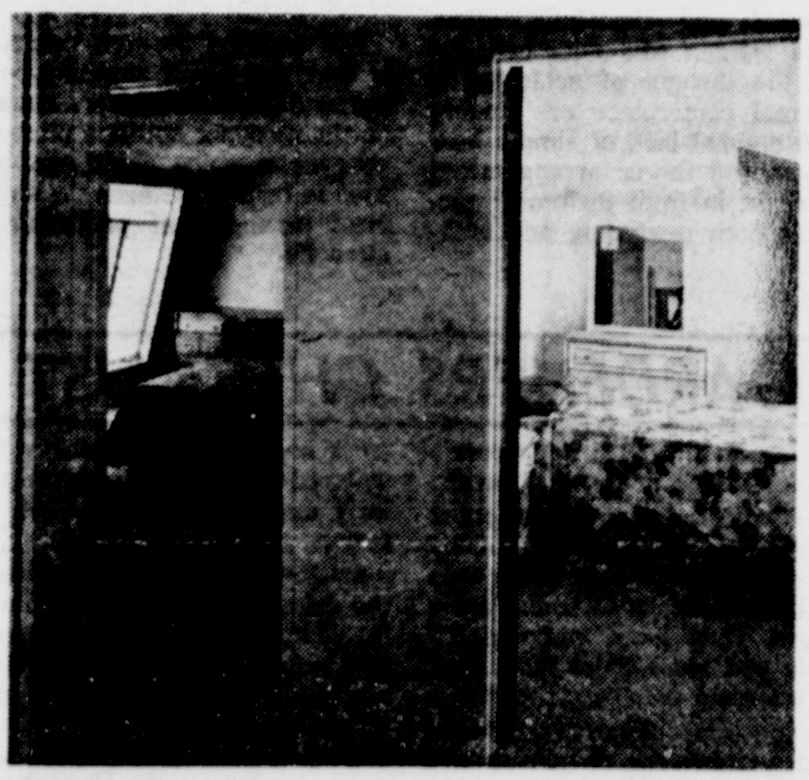
The two-story house, which is now open to the public for inspection, features nearly 1,700 square feet of floor space, three bedrooms and two and one-half bathrooms.

Furnished by the Montgomery Ward Co., the attractive house has an unusual two-story high living room.

General contractor for the project was the Koenig Construction Co.



AN ATTRACTIVE non-conventional look was achieved in the master bedroom with the exposed steel beams and a gambrele shaped roofline. Eight and 10-inch wide-flange steel beams by Bethelehem Steel were used for the frame of the home.



CATHEDRAL CEILINGS and sloping outer walls are featured in the small but attractive second and third bedrooms of the Derieux-Willis home. Interior stained glass window separates the upstairs bedroom from the downstairs living area which is two stories high.

For The Hot Spot—

One of the primary garden problems of California is the planting treatment of hot, dry areas.

In Marin, the problem is less pressing than in the inland areas of the state and in the southlands. Nevertheless, most of us have those areas that are baked by the hot, mid-day summer sun, and which may be difficult to water.

Fortunately, there are a great variety of plants well adapted to this unfavorable situation.

STARTING FROM the ground up, the lowest growing varieties include many of the manzanitas and ceanothus, both well qualified for dry situations in full sun because that is their natural habitat. Most have pinkish flowers in spring, then red berries.

The rock roses are a little taller, from two to four feet and spreading in form. There is a good selection of flowers colors, including pure white with yellow centers, white petals with mahogany spots and rose pink petals with maroon spots.

The foliage usually is gray-green and makes a dense cover over the horizontal branches.

THERE ARE also manzanitas and ceanothus in this medium height group: Howard McMimm and Harmony manzanitas have generous clusters of real pink flowers and a rounded shape. Julia Phelps and Mary Lake ceanothus have deep blue flowers and a compact habit.

For background shrubs or screening effects in hot, dry places, our native Toyon does a very good job. So does the Fraser photinia with its flashing red new foliage against a background of light green leaves.

And how about the native "cherries"? These are fast-growing shrubby plants with glossy foliage and white flower clusters in spring.

THE MANY varieties and colors of oleanders can be grouped in either medium or tall classification, depending upon whether or not you use the pruning shears. The single reds, whites and pinks may be generally classified as naturally tall. Some of the double-flowered kinds like Mrs. F. Roeding (a salmon pink) rate in the medium class.

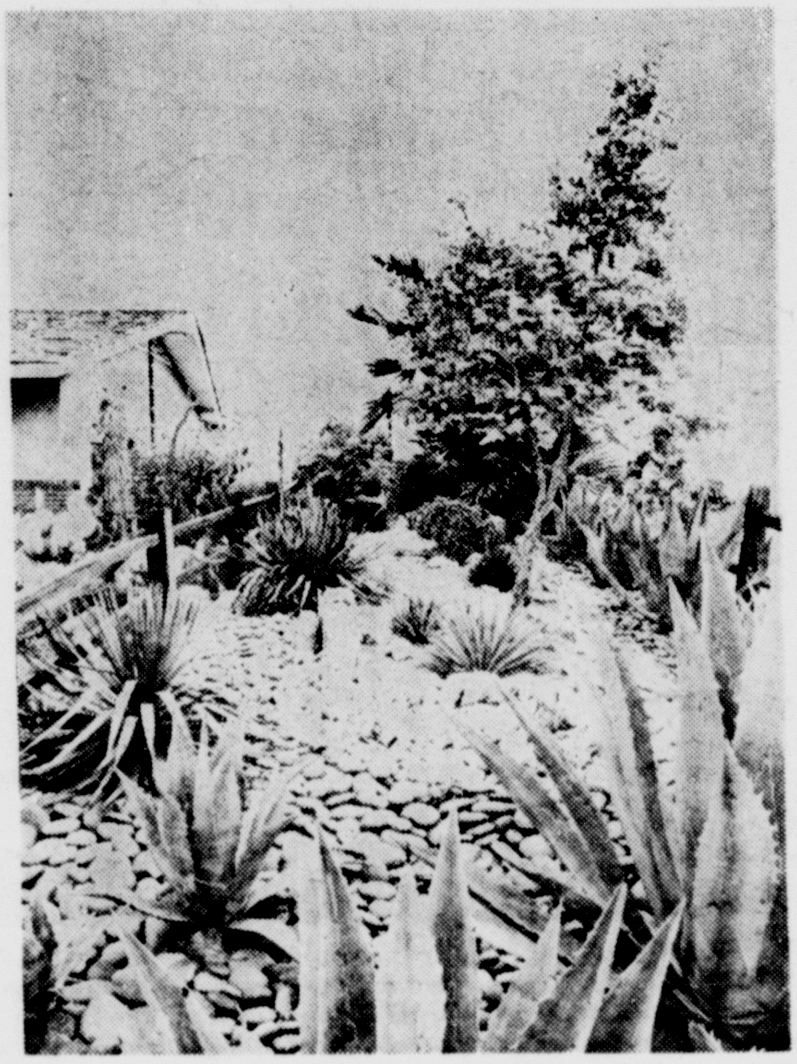
Extra care should be used in soil preparation and planting in hot, dry areas. Spend a little time at this point and save many hours and many gallons of water later.

The holes should be dug two or three times larger than required to contain the plant. Throw in some redwood soil conditioner, peat moss or compost and mix it up with topsoil taken from the hole. Use this mixture around the plants, saving the balance of the soil to construct a capacious basin around each plant.

SOAK THE plants and fill the basins with a slow stream of water. Add a little topsoil where soil level is depressed. Fill in the basin with a mulch of fir-bark or other material recommended by your nurseryman.

Two weeks after planting you can start to feed with an all-purpose dry or liquid fertilizer. Soak first, then add the recommended amount (as listed on the container) then soak again. Follow up with light feedings once a month until midfall, or when the plants obviously have stopped growing.

Once established in this manner, your planting will require only occasional irrigation and feeding in succeeding years.



AN ARRANGEMENT of smooth rock with carved-looking succulents and cactus can make a living sculpture that's fascinating to the hobbyist and a dramatic, maintenance-free garden for anyone. They love hot sun, and couldn't care less about water.

You'll Enjoy Being Close To These Plants For The Patio

Now that summer is in full swing, the plants around our patios and other outdoor sitting areas are taking on a new importance.

This month your garden isn't so much to be looked at as to be lived in, and if you want to make your favorite spot into an inviting oasis, try adding some of the appealing plants the California Assn. of Nurserymen recommends for close up enjoyment.

WELL-GROOMED, shiny cleanliness is all-important in the plants you share your patio with, and for one that combines this quality with a lovely fragrance and bright, edible fruit, you can't beat the Meyer Lemon. Put one in a container handy to your garden chairs, and you'll find its fragrance drawing you toward them more often.

Another fragrant charmer, and one more Californians should take advantage of—is the glamorous gardenia. With foliage as glossy-green as a camellia and the kind of waxy-white flowers that are the florist's delight, it makes a beautiful conversation piece in the July patio. Give your gardenia a rich acid soil, plenty of sun and water and fertilizer in generous amounts.

Other fragrant plants to consider are the profusely blooming jasmine vines and scented leaf geraniums in variety.

ONCE YOU'VE followed your nose to your outdoor room, you'll enjoy it twice as much if you have bright flowers spilling from hanging baskets and pots as well as grouped in containers on the ground.

Fuchsias are invaluable for their clean, lush foliage, exquisite, pendulous blooms. If you haven't seen the newest introductions, browse your nursery for the lovely shades and combinations of colors available in bloom now. They're enthusiastic growers, so you can count on cascades of beauty all summer.

Starry bellflowers in white or pale blue can be bought in bloom to trail their color downwards, and ivy geraniums are another way to hang fresh color from above.

TUBEROUS BEGONIAS can be bought in bloom this month for instant beauty to enjoy close-up, and your nurseryman will show you other exquisite candidates for patio color.

And don't overlook the pleasure you'll get from some of the choice foliage plants, such as the light and airy Heavenly Bamboo or the oriental-appearing pococarpus.

Pots of succulents make easy-to-grow conversation pieces, and one gardener made an interesting conversation piece to set on a low table by planting a tiny Japanese Maple in a bowl and adding a "ground cover" of bright Irish Moss.

Flower Arranging Continues Its Growth In Popularity

Flower arranging continues to be one of our most popular summer pastimes with more and more women trying their hand at it.

Today the stress is on the informal and the imaginative, and women who once rebelled at the thought of achieving a formal centerpiece are finding the natural look of simple bouquets and flower arrangements brought in from their own gardens both rewarding and creative.

Why the change in attitude? For one thing the array of dwarf annuals available to home gardeners.

These new flowers just beg to be picked and arranged!

For another, the new concept is that just about anything can be used as a container. Sugar bowls, a copper kettle, a pitcher or even a spice chest can be used to help make even the simplest arrangement particularly attractive.

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

✔ Gladiolus bulbs that bloomed earlier and have browned off by now should be lifted and the tops cut off about an inch above the corm. Dust them with insecticide and store them in a cool, dry place.

✔ You can plant Michaelmas daisies now for clouds of lavender-blue in late summer. If you didn't put in chrysanthemums before this, you can still plant them from containers or plant bands and they will bloom on schedule. Keep them well watered and feed them regularly until buds begin to set.

✔ This is the time to see summer shrubs in bloom and choose the colors and shapes you want in your landscape. Oleanders, hydrangeas, hibiscus, and abelia are some to consider, and for a cooling sky-blue to freshen a July garden, don't miss the appealing Blue Cape Plumbago.

✔ Don't let your roses dry out, and keep removing any growth that appears below the bud union.

THE NATION'S first family, President John F. and Jacqueline Kennedy, with baby Caroline, posed for photographers in this study included in the memorial documentary, "The Young Man From Boston," to be seen Wednesday at 9:30 p.m. on KGO-TV.

A Television Tribute To Kennedy

The personal life of John F. Kennedy, from his childhood through the presidency, will be detailed in a one-hour television special titled "The Young Man From Boston," which will be aired Wednesday at 9:30 p.m. on KGO-TV.

Never-before-seen film footage and photographs, secured from family and friends, are blended into a tribute to the late president.

THE HOUR-LONG program is narrated by Joseph Cotten with original background music performed by the Kingston Trio and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. Motion picture, television and recording star Gordon MacRae is soloist and lead voice with the choir.

Original folk lyrics were written by multi-Academy Award winner Paul Francis Webster. The book for the program was written by another Academy Award winner, Stephen Longstreet, and the original music was composed by producer Allan Jay Friedman.

The program will show the late president as his family and friends knew him best—as a bright, happy child, an aggressive young football player, an inconspicuous Harvard freshman, an enthusiastic sailor . . . and, above all, a family man who loved and was loved.

JACQUELINE KENNEDY cooperated in the preparation of the special, providing many valuable insights, personal photographs, as well as approving the final script.

The production of "The Young Man From Boston" represents the culmination of eight months preparation and thousands of man hours of research. All data were authenticated by Jules North, who performed a similar task for ABC's "The Making of a President," which won an "Emmy" for "the best single program of 1964."

Personal interviews with Mrs. Kennedy, his personal secretary Evelyn Lincoln, press secretary Pierre Salinger, Undersecretary of the Navy Paul Fay, Supreme Court Justice Byron White, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., classmates from prep school and college, and friends from his years in the Navy provide a valuable insight into the man who became the youngest president in this nation's history.

"THE YOUNG Man From Boston" was produced by KABC-TV, the ABC owned station in Los Angeles, with Allan Jay Friedmann producer, Steve Mills executive producer, and Howard H. Lipstone, program director in charge of production.

John Urie and Associates assembled the materials and were in charge of the production design.

Rectangular Color TV! in compact cabinets

MOTOROLA

New Slim Styling
Because Motorola's new rectangular-picture tube is over five inches shorter than conventional round color tubes, the cabinet is thinner from front to back. And since the tube cap on the back is smaller, the set fits close to the wall.
